Union Violence Hits Montreal, Sept-Iles

Times News Services

The third straight day of labor unrest hit Quebec today as thousands of union members continued walkouts protesting both the jailing of three union leaders and their own working conditions.

Montreal and Sept-Iles, 400 miles northeast of Quebec City bore the brunt of the protest but other communities were also affected.

Two small bombs exploded today at two separate small power stations serving Montreal's subway system, causing some damage but not interfering with normal operations.

But motor traffic was in turmoil early today in the city after kegs of nails were dumped on one bridge and a main expressway. Police said the nails on the west-end Mercier bridge across the St. Lawrence River and on the north-end Metropolitan Expressway could "be tied in with the labor conflicts.

MECHANICS LEAVE

Also in Montreal 400 garage mechanics who service buses and subway trains for the public transit system left their jobs to join other sympathy walkouts across the province protesting the imprisonment Tuesday of Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau.

Union leaders said thousands of construction workers, who stayed away from building sites in Montreal and Quebec City Wednesday, were continuing the walkouts today.

In Quebec City, Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer told a legislature committee today he is as "desperate as other ministers' in dealings with the federal government but the central government was not going to "have his skin."

He told Premier Robert Bourassa that if the Quebec government could stand up to unions it could stand up to the federal government, which he said is bludgeoning Quebec.

The dramatic attack by a minister on the Liberal government's dealings with federal authorities came on the heels of reports that two other Quebec cabinet ministers have resigned over recent federal moves in the social welfare field. The reports could not be officially confirmed.

Published reports have said the other cabinet ministers are Social Affairs Minister Claude Castonguay and Civil Service Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier.

Sept-Iles, the iron ore town, faced another tense day today after about 5,000 metal and construction workers agreed at a union rally to continue protest walkouts.

STAY OUT

At today's rally they said they would remain off the job until the three leaders — Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau — are released from jail.

Meanwhile, Mayor Donald Galliene said the situation in the town was peaceful. He appealed to the population of 18,000 to stay at home today if possible to avoid a repetition of Wednesday's clashes with police.

"I don't think we're going to have any more trouble," he said. "I've told everybody to stay home — that way we won't run into situations like we had yesterday."

The trouble began early

Lift Blockade, Says Russia

Times News Services

The Soviet Union demanded today that the United States immediately cancel its "piratic" naval blockade of North Vietnam, warning that the U.S. was following "a dangerous and slippery road" which endangered international peace and security.

China joined in to denounce the U.S. action of planting mines in North Vietnam's harbors, calling the move "a flagrant provocation against the people of Vietnam and the world."

Shells from what the 7th Fleet said was the most powerful cruiser-destroyer fleet assembled in the western Pacific since the Second World War were striking within four miles of Haiphong.

At the same time, North Vietnamese land forces battled their way into the provincial capital of An Loc, which has been under siege since April 7. North Vietnamese also continued a heavy barrage on two other fronts — the central highlands and near Hue.

In Washington, President Nixon met two high ranking Soviet officials today — a surprise session which indicated to observers the increased U.S. offensive in Vietnam, and the resulting Soviet condemnation, still may not wreck the May 22 Moscow summit.

The Russian reaction, reported by the Tass News Agency and broadcast by Moscow Radio, pledged continued military help to North Vietnam and said if the United States wanted peace in Vietnam it should return to the Paris peace talk tables. No mention was made of Nixon's forthcoming visit to Moscow.

The Russians said no matter what false pretexts are used to cover up the adventurist actions of the U.S. armed forces in Vietnam the real purpose of these actions is obvious — "to save the notorious Vietnamization policy which suffers an obvious failure."

"These actions show again for the whole world the piratic nature of the war which the United States has unleashed and continues against the Vietnamese people for many years."

In South Vietnam, President Nguyen Van Thieu signed new martial laws into effect today, subjecting citizens to more taxes, less fun, extended draft ages, press gangs and police searches.

The laws order 18-year-old youths to report immediately for military service, cut down on deferments and raise the draft age from 33 to 43.

Tankers To Ply West Coast

Times News Services

United States Interior Secretary Rogers Morton this afternoon approved construction of the controversial Trans-Alaska pipeline, rejecting a proposed Canadian alternative down the Mackenzie River basin to Edmonton.

The decision means oil supertankers will be plying the British Columbia coast, through the Strait of Juan de Fuca to Cherry Point, Washington.

In Victoria Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal MP David Anderson said: "It's tremendous news for us," because he has learned his appeal in U.S. Supreme Court was won today as well.

The Supreme Court has ruled Canadians, namely Anderson and the Canadian Wildlife Federation, can argue in a U.S. court.

"I now have a right to argue in court that the U.S. Department of the Interior acted illegally in issuing a permit as it has done today," Anderson said.

In Vancouver, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said he was "disappointed" at the U.S. decision.

He described the proposed pipeline and oil tanker route as "a very, very foolish move" and said Canada will continue to fight against it.

Sharp said U.S. authorities didn't give adequate consideration to Canada's submission favoring a Mackenzie valley route.

The sudden announcement, while not unexpected, did come as a surprise in Ottawa where as late as Wednesday afternoon Energy and Resources Minister Donald MacDonald was telling the Commons Canada has again

COLLISION KILLS 73

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuter) — All 73 persons aboard a British freighter were feared dead or missing following a pre-dawn collision today with a Liberian oil tanker, port authorities said.

Both vessels were enveloped in flames following the collision in the River Plate, off Montevideo.

Highways To North Get $15M

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Chretien, minister of Indian affairs and northern development, announced today the federal government will spend $15 million this year on two highways to the north that eventually will cost $166 million.

The $15 million is the largest amount of money spent by his department in a single year on northern roads and is a clear indication of the government's "commitment to northern development," he said in a speech that touched on everything from Indians to highways and pipelines.

He said the $9.1 million of the $15 million will be spent on the Mackenzie Highway and the remainder to the highway between Dempster, in the Yukon, to Arctic Red River, N.W.T.

CRTC May Probe SC Radio Ads

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission will "investigate" if local British Columbia radio stations refuse to grant New Democratic leader Dave Barrett the "free and equal" time he wants to counteract two pro-Socred broadcast series, an official of the commission said today.

John Lawrence of the CRTC, made the comment in Ottawa when asked to elaborate on a telegram received Wednesday from chairman Pierre Juneau to Barrett.

Barrett had earlier written to Juneau to ask for CRTC support in his campaign for free broadcast time to offset the current Ask Your Provincial Government series and a series of pro-Socred editorial comments sponsored by London Drugs.

Although Lawrence said that the commission would investigate any complaint arising out of a broadcaster's refusal to provide free and equal time, he pointed out that this did not mean that the stations "necessarily" have any obligation to provide it.

NEWS BRIEFS

Talks Continue

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for the Municipal Labor Relations Bureau and Vancouver-area civic employees resumed contract negotiations Wednesday and planned to continue talks today. Union officials declined comment after Wednesday's session and MLRB director Graham Leslie said only that "things are not going badly."

Nixon Wants Oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today authorized a 15-per-cent increase in oil imports for the balance of 1972. The Canadian allotment was boosted by 30,000 barrels to 570,000 barrels.

Chabot Acts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Labor Minister James Chabot says he wants to meet separately Friday with representatives of the International Woodworkers of America and Forest Industrial Relations to discuss B.C. coast forest industry contract talks, "the position we're in and where we go from here."

Court Ace Quits

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Burwash of Toronto quit Canada's Davis Cup team in huff today, the day before the tie against Mexico. The unexpected move came after playing-coach Mike Belkin selected Tony Bardsley of Vancouver to contest one of the singles matches against the Mexicans.

COMPENSATION CAME MORE WAYS THAN ONE

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A woman rather messily altered an $84.36 workmen's compensation cheque to read $200,984.36 and a bank cashed it last week, State Treasurer Gertrude Donahey said today. It was one of the largest forgeries in Ohio history.

The forger, who was not identified, fled with the money to Florida before the fraud was discovered. But Mrs. Donahey said a police officer found her and recovered all but $7,000.

IRA BEAT GIRL FOR FIVE DAYS

BELFAST (CP-AP) — Police described today the condition of a 15-year-old girl beaten for five days and tarred and feathered by the IRA as "sickening." Her face was beaten to a pulp and her hair torn out by the roots.

The official wing of the Irish Republican Army said the girl was a spy for Scotland Yard and had given information, in return for money and drugs, which had led to the arrest of some men.

Belfast police said the IRA's spy accusation "obviously is a wild attempt to justify a most brutal assault on a young girl."

The girl, whose name was withheld for her security, lives near the Northern Ireland capital's Falls Road, an IRA citadel. She was taken from her home Friday night.

Police said a nightmare five days followed. They said she was moved secretly from place to place, beaten at regular intervals, her hair shaven and torn out by the roots.

The climax of her "punishment" came Wednesday when she was tarred and feathered in front of some 200 persons. Soldiers found her lying beside a lamp-post, unable to walk.

A police spokesman said: "The girl was in a condition that can only be described as sickening. Her face, legs and body are a mass of bruises—her face was beaten to a pulp."

In a statement, the IRA said the girl's "punishment" would have been more severe if she had been older. "We would like to inform residents of the need for this action and why it was so lenient. This person was a member of a spy ring operating in this town."

Manpower Snipped—Phil Laughs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada Manpower and Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi are engaged in a battle of words over who can claim credit for swiping from Oregon State a course for job applicants called creative job search techniques.

It started when Canada Manpower officials in Vancouver accused Gaglardi of pinching their posters outlining the program, which has been in use for about 2½ years.

Manpower said Gaglardi was cutting the name Canada Manpower off the bottoms of the posters and sticking them up on the walls of the Victoria office of the B.C. Alliance of Businessmen, an organization set up by Gaglardi to help unemployed persons find work.

Doug Tang, a Manpower specialist in agency relationships, said the federal organization got the program from the Oregon bureau of labor in 1968. They said it was first tried in the Manpower office in Victoria and later adopted as a national program.

He said the free three-hour course is between 70 and 75 per cent successful in enabling applicants to land jobs.

Jacques Khouri, a Manpower public relations man, said the B.C. government "is leading people to believe they are conducting the program."

Gaglardi retorted, "Excuse me while I fall off my chair laughing.

"I was the guy who brought the program in from Portland."

In Portland, Norman Nilsen, Oregon state labor commissioner, suggested both were wrong.

Nilsen, one of the founders of the Oregon program, said he believed he passed the idea along to B.C. Attorney-General Leslie Peterson who held the labor portfolio until 1968.

Nilsen said Peterson "is a friend of mine and a very fine fellow."

Anti-War Demonstrations Swell

Times News Services

Hundreds of anti-war protesters were arrested by police across the United States today as demonstrations against President Nixon's blockade of North Vietnamese ports erupted in cities coast to coast.

The blockade also sparked mass demonstrations against the U.S. in centres around the world.

The United Nations building was closed to the public today after demonstrators chained themselves to seats in the security council chamber. In Paris, thousands marched through the capital in protest, and in London police were called our to remove demonstrators from around the U.S. embassy.

Several persons were injured in Manila when demonstrators started tossing homemade grenades outside the U.S. embassy.

In the U.S., arrests were estimated to have topped 900 this week, with the National Guard called out to patrol university grounds.

The disorders were the most serious since the May, 1970, protests over the U.S. invasion of Cambodia, when colleges and universities through the country were shut down.

The Massachusetts Senate voted 36 to 1 to condemn the mining of Vietnam waters "in the strongest possible terms."

Six Democratic governors joined in a telegram urging Nixon "to reverse this grave and dangerous policy decision."

More than 250 policemen used tear gas and nightsticks to disperse some 3,000 protesters at the University of Florida in Gainesville Wednesday night.

In Victoria, a demonstration protesting the U.S. blockade of North Vietnam is planned by the Student Anti-War Committee at 5 p.m. today in Centennial Square.

Three members of the committee, Cliff Mack, a UVic student, Jim MacLean from Oak Bay High and Joan Murray from Oak Bay Junior will address the demonstration.

They also authorize unlimited police searches of private homes; give mayors the powers to impress citizens for urgent civil or military needs; levy additional taxes on movie tickets and restaurant tabs; deny travel abroad to all males of draft age; and allow officials to ration food.

In the north, about 25 miles from Hue, the North Vietnamese launched their first sizeable probes against the My Chanh river defence line and were pushed back. Military sources predicted a major assault around May 19, the birthday of Ho Chi Minh.

Tank-led Communist forces launched their second attack in three days against the Ben Het base camp in the central highlands. The South Vietnamese said the assault was beaten off with U.S. and South Vietnamese planes, killing 167 North Vietnamese and destroying 11 tanks.

Hanoi radio said eight more American jets were shot down over North Vietnam, five over Hanoi itself. It also reported two Russian ships hit in Haiphong harbor and a Chinese trade mission hit in Hanoi.

The U.S. command said 10 MiGs were destroyed in air battles over the north, for the loss of three American planes, bringing the total to 38 planes and 37 helicopters lost since the start of the North Vietnamese offensive March 30.

Wednesday when union workers took control of radio station CKCN shortly after 9:30 a.m. and began making their own broadcasts.

SET UP ROADBLOCKS

Roadblocks were set up Wednesday by workers on all access roads to the town and battles with police broke out in the downtown area. At the height of the outbreaks, provincial police dropped canisters of tear gas from a helicopter on the demonstrators.

One man drove into a crowd of protesters and injured 35 persons, one critically. Ten persons were arrested by police during the clashes.

A special 75-man provincial police emergency unit, flown from Montreal by Canadian Armed Forces aircraft, entered the town at 11 p.m., cleared up the roadblocks and returned operations at the radio station to normal.

All businesses except a few grocery stores and pharmacies were open today. They had closed Wednesday.

About 2,000 workers, mostly employed by Iron Ore of Canada and Wabush Mines Ltd., still were off the job.

Reporter David Oancia said:

"We passed the first roadblock a couple miles from the airport as we flew west toward the town. A truck trailer, laden with heavy cement pipes, had been parked across the highway.

"Two large yellow buses and a smaller green one blocked the shoulders of the road, but cars were still passing unhindered by the strikers manning the blockade."

The two men later walked around the town.

"Eight police vehicles had been knocked out of action — the nose of one was smashed in, a few had been battered and the tires of most had been slashed."

In Mont Laurier, 100 miles north of Ottawa, 125 teachers also walked out. Another 1,300 teachers were expected at a rally at a Montreal high school occupied by 500 teachers.

The CNTU council in Ste. Hyacinthe, 30 miles east of Montreal, announced that about 2,500 members of its 44 affiliated unions would hold study sessions Friday to show solidarity with the three imprisoned labor leaders.

expressed its concern to Washington over the tanker plan.

Robert N. Thompson, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Red Deer, Alberta, who raised the issue Wednesday during the question period, today condemned the Liberal government for lack of concrete action on the issue.

"The Canadian government has not — repeat, not — carried the ball as they should have regarding an alternative pipeline route, therefore leaving the Americans wide open for approval of the TAPS (Trans-Alaska Pipeline System), pipeline, and thereby endangering the whole B.C. Pacific coast," he told the Times.

"For five days now, knowing that such a decision was coming," he said, "I have tried to get the minister and the prime minister to make some statement regarding their feasibility findings for a Mackenzie River pipeline."

The Mackenzie route, he said, is "the only alternative to the destruction of the ecology and environment of the whole Pacific coast."

"For some reason the government has refused to recognize the urgency of the situation," Thompson said.

The pipeline, which would carry oil from the vast North Slope reserves to the southern Alaska port of Valdez, may be delayed for some time, despite Morton's decision today.

Because of injunctions obtained by American conservation groups, which have already stalled it for two years, Morton merely submitted notice today to the environmentalists that he intends to issue the required permits. It is not up to the U.S. courts to decide whether or not the pipeline will be built.

Thompson today brought Morton's announcement to the floor of the House in Ottawa, asking the government what its next step would be.

However, Prime Minister Trudeau, Energy and Resources Minister MacDonald and Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien were all absent from the Commons.

LAING REPLIES

As a result, Thompson said, Veterans' Affairs Minister Arthur Laing delivered a "very weak" reply.

Laing, Thompson said, merely pointed out that Canada six months ago offered the Mackenzie River route as an alternative to the TAPS line.

Morton's statement today said a Canadian line would require "at least three to five years" longer than the three years estimated for delivery of oil through the Alaska line.

Morton's statement listed three specific factors working against the Canadian alternative:

"2. Uncertainty and delay in arranging for financing of a trans-Canada oil pipeline.

"3. Delay of project pending the completion of environmental, engineering, and construction studies for a Canadian route."

The interior secretary said he is "convinced that it is our best national interest to avoid all further delays and uncertainties in planning the development of Alaska North Slope oil reserves by having a secure pipeline located under the total jurisdiction and for the exclusive use of the United States."

Morton's mention of U.S. requirements for all of the pipeline capacity apparently referred to suggestions that a trans-Canadian route could also be used to carry oil from Canada's Mackenzie Valley and would thus involve deliveries of some oil to Canadian refineries.

Here in Victoria both Ray Williston, Minister of Lands, Forests and Water Resources and Ken Kiernan, Minister of Recreation and Conservation, were unavailable for comment on the development.

B.C. ATTITUDE

However, Valter Raudsepp, Deputy Minister of Water Resources, pointed out that the official B.C. attitude, as previously outlined in the Legislature, is that the pipeline negotiations are under the jurisdiction of the United States and Ottawa.

"The government would not feel that we can make direct representation to the Americans," Raudsepp said. He pointed out that the B.C. government had asked Ottawa to ensure that steps be taken "to find an alternative solution to the tanker route."

He would not comment on whether the B.C. government would make further approaches to Ottawa on the question.

DANNY BOY REFUSAL GETS SYRUPY REPLY

STOCKPORT, England (AP) — A nightclub singer was doused with molasses and sprinkled with feathers after she turned down a customer's request to sing the Irish ballad Danny Boy.

Kathy Varden, 24, told police a band of men dragged her into a park, gagged her and tied her to a fence before the molasses-and-feathers treatment.

Two men held down Miss Varden's 35-year-old husband Harry while the others poured half a bucket of molasses over her, she said. They ran away, leaving a placard pinned to her dress. "Danny Boy forever," it said.

The couple was treated in a hospital for shock and bruises, authorities reported.

Chicago 7 Win Appeal

Three judges of the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals voted unanimously to overturn the contempt sentences imposed at the 4½-month trial by U.S. district court Judge Julius Hoffman. Hoffman had imposed the contempt sentences for the behavior of the defendants, attorneys William Kunstler and Leonard Weinglass, and Black Panther leader Bobby Seale.

The appeals court ordered that the 10 be given a trial on the contempt charges by a judge other than Hoffman, who imposed contempt sentences up to four years after the trial, which ran during the end of 1969 and the beginning of 1970.

Kunstler was given a term of four years and 13 days for acts of contempt during the trial. Seale, national chairman of the Black Panther party, was sentenced to four years for contempt. The smallest contempt sentence issued was two months, 18 days, against defendant Lee Weiner.

The three-judge appeals court — in a decision written by Judge Walter Cummings — made it ruling on the basis of a U.S. Supreme Court decision requiring a trial judge to let a different judge impose contempt sentences if they were given at the conclusion of a trial.

In the case of Seale, the appeals court said four of the 16 different acts of contempt on which Hoffman sentenced him were "legally insufficient." The appeals court dropped them from any new trial.

14 More Bodies Found in Mine

KELLOGG, Idaho (UPI) — Rescue workers fanning out through the depths of the Sunshine mine today found 14 more bodies of miners trapped when fire broke out nine days ago, raising the death toll to 65.

Only two survivors have been found so far.

"That leaves 26 men still unaccounted for," said Marvin Chase, the mine's vice-president and general manager. "We're still hoping these men are alive."

Chase said there were indications the fire inside the United States largest silver mine "may be dying."

He said seven victims found at mid-morning died quickly while eating lunch and when found were still sitting.

"It was very sudden," Chase said.

Another seven bodies were found before dawn at the 3,700-foot level. The two survivors were rescued Tuesday night 1,100 feet farther down.

Chase said the seven victims found first today were at the 3,700-foot level.

They said the sealing operation was essential to preserve the escape route in the event the missing miners at the bottom of the shaft had survived and were untouched by the gases in the higher level.

The rescuers told mine officials similar sealing efforts would be required at the 3,550-foot level and once again at 3,700 feet deep.

Experts said this meant that the goal of 5,200 feet was many hours away.

Twenty-five persons were injured by flying glass and fragments as the bomb gouged out the centre of the store, which was closed for the day. None was seriously hurt.

Firemen were prevented from tackling a fierce fire which followed the explosion by an anonymous telephone warning that another bomb was inside. The £10 million ($26 million) building was destroyed.

British troops and Irish guerrillas fought a fierce gun battle in Londonderry early today.

The soldiers claimed to have hit four raiders in clashes which flared for more than three hours from 1 a.m. There were no army casualties.

The fighting centred on the military command post in a former factory in Bligh's Lane on the edge of "Free Derry," where 35,000 Catholics live behind barricades under the rule of the IRA.

About 400 people fought and hurled rocks at each other and barricades were built in several streets.

Trouble came to Portadown — normally one of Northern Ireland's most peaceful towns — when Protestant soccer supporters were attacked as they passed by a Catholic estate on their way home from a match.

The fighting quickly spread and an army spokesman said that at one point a sniper opened fire on a crowd.

NASHVILLE STOMPER STAMPED OUT

NASHVILLE (AP) — Two college co-eds have put the finger on a man accused of stamping on their toes.

George Mitchell was sentenced to three consecutive terms of 11 months 29 days after being charged with assault and battery for stamping on the feet of Liz Alsobrook, 18, of Peabody College, and Alexis Fitzhaugh, 19, of Vanderbilt University.

Authorities said Mitchell has an 11-year record of police complaints that he stamped on women's toes — for variety he dropped books or bags of cement on them.

Police said he apparently pulled the stunts to facilitate purse snatching.

U.S. Charges Tire Dumping

WASHINGTON (CP) — In the first case of its kind, the U.S. treasury department said today it is considering imposing extra customs duties on tires imported from Canada because the Canadian government helped build the factory.

The department issued a notice that it is investigating a countervailing duty order covering X-radial steel-belted tires from Michelin Tires Manufacturing Co. of Canada Ltd. A countervailing duty order is an extra import charge to offset subsidies that the importer may be receiving.

Department spokesmen said the Canadian government provided grants to the company to help it construct two plants, one for the wire and the other for the tires. The plants are at Granton and Bridgewater, N.S.

It was clear that "a large percentage of these tires are going to be exported to the U.S.A.," the official said.

The plant began production late last year and, since December, imports of truck tires alone from the company to the U.S. totalled about $3.3 million, the department said.

AUTO TIRES NEXT

"Right now, its truck tires. We think it will soon be automobile tires. We think production is going to rise tremendously."

Usually, countervailing duty orders are issued when a foreign importer gets direct subsidies from his government so that he can have an easier time penetrating the U.S. market.

Never before has the U.S. threatened extra import charges for subsidies that go to help build factories, especially when most all of the goods are destined for the American market.

The treasury department is expected to make a final ruling within two months.

It is the biggest case alleging unfair trade practices by Canada since trade talks between the two countries broke off earlier this year.

Banking By Mail Protest

An advertising campaign urging people to bank by mail has drawn the wrath of the Post Office . . . even though sponsors of the campaign say the Post Office is protesting something they didn't have in mind anyway.

A newspaper ad run in Vancouver on Wednesday by the Bank of British Columbia showed a picture of a mailbox with the explanation: One of our convenient smaller branches. A mailbox can be your convenient neighborhood banking facility.

A bank spokesman replied that the idea of the service is to get people to send cheques in for deposit — not money.

The ad has been discussed with the bank and "we don't think they'll run it again," said a Post Office official in Vancouver.

A Patient, Persevering Thief

The word from the federal statistics office is that what cost the consumer $100 in April of 1961 has increased in price over the past 11 years to $138.20. That is the present level of the cost-of-living index. In other words, more than one-fourth of its purchasing power has been eroded from the $100 put into a bond or a bank vault only 11 years ago, when the present baseline was established.

But what one could buy with $100 in 1961, cost only $60 in 1946, when the previous index basis was announced. In 25 years prices have more than doubled. In 25 years, savings have been cut in half, even though the money, or the bond certificate, or the pension document has been lying "safely" in a vault.

In the short term, the rising price index is noted mainly in moments of protest against the latest one-or-two-per-cent increase in the cost of meat, or shoes, or rent. And the rate of increase plays its part in wage demands — which not only keep abreast or ahead of price rises but inevitably contribute to a still steeper inflationary climb.

It is when the Ottawa statisticians come out with comparisons over a longer period of time that the enormity of inflation strikes home. Many investments do not return an interest rate sufficient to do much more than repay what has been lost by inflation. Not many pension plans, paid into for many years, are based on rates of interest which will do much more than keep even with the declining purchasing value of the dollar.

Thus the pensioner, which will mean almost everyone when his retirement age comes, is barely keeping even with the rise of prices even while he is paying into the fund. When he retires and starts to draw on his slowly accumulated wealth, he will have lost the ability to contribute more to compensate for inflation; he will be at the mercy of the dollar's decline.

We read of the millions of dollars a year lost through theft from retail stores, of the millions taken from society by organized crime, of other millions spent on armaments which, however much security they may provide, are not productive of goods. But even against these, inflation emerges as a major cause of loss to the general public — a quiet thief which saps the strength of those least able to stand its depradations.

Mr. John Turner's new proposal to adjust the Old Age Pension and increments annually to match the rise in the cost of living should remove a long-standing cause of dissatisfaction. But the raise will add its own pressure to the inflation spiral, since it will contribute to consumer demand without producing goods or services. That, however, may not be as evident as the help the supplementary payments provide to the individual, or as evident as the extra cost that will be levied on the tax dollar. The thief can await his time; when he becomes obvious, it is too late.

Economics of the Poppy

An agreement by which the United States will advance $11.4 millions to Turkey to help compensate Turkish farmers for a ban on opium poppy cultivation, starting this year, represents a significant gesture in co-operation on the narcotics traffic. How far the joint effort — if it is successful — will go in curtailing drug addiction is questionable.

The point was made, however, in an earlier Associated Press report, that Turkey has been providing from one-half to three-quarters of the United States' total supply of heroin, the narcotic causing widest concern on this continent.

Elimination of the Turkish poppy crop seems feasible, if Turkish authorities are willing to eradicate it, and the resultant financial loss to the farmers would not bear any realistic comparison to the money spent on heroin in the final transaction to users in the United States and Canada. The Associated Press report places the value of the product in the poppy fields of Turkey at a thousandth of its end-price on the street. In this day of the green revolution, it should not be impossible to find another crop equally as profitable to the man on the land.

But the very fact that the illegal price pyramids the original return on the raw crop furnishes its own dismaying commentary on the unlawful narcotics traffic. As long as the pusher can make the kind of money available to him or her from a market, captive through dependence on the drug, there are people who will risk trafficking, no matter what the penalities.

The current attention focused on heroin makes the agreement between the United States and Turkey impressive to North Americans. Unanswered is the problem of a possible switch to some other narcotic — the synthetics for instance — if heroin is cut off.

Told by the Wind

From Zaanse Schans, Holland, comes word that the age of wind-powered machinery is not yet over and a miller of the very old school there is justifying the argument by grinding seeds and nuts for their oil in a windmill-equipped operation.

He has one of about 300 windmills still operable in the country where 66 out of 100 don't work any more.

Technically, say the experts, modernized windmills are feasible. Practically they are not. But there are isolated instances in which they function adequately — as in the case of a mill on the island of Texel, which produces electricity inexpensively.

Here, obviously, is a theme for the environment protectors, the assurance of clean air and no fuel waste to be disposed of. Now, if someone can invent a clipper ship using sails and wind, and a prairie schooner, which should add joy to the organic enthusiasts, we'll be on our way to a restored ecological paradise — and the elimination of speed which causes so much stress and nervous strain.

DAVID HUMPHREYS

A Fractured German Identity

BONN — What does it mean to be German? If there were anything resembling a consensus among West Germans in answer to that question there would probably be no political crisis here today.

In place of consensus there is confusion. Twenty-seven years after the Second World War, West Germans, particularly the youth, are searching for an identity. The post-war success of the "economic miracle" absorbed the nation's energies until recently.

Now West Germany resembles many another western industrial country worried by inflation. West Germans who can remember the runaway inflation of the Weimar Republic particularly regard the rate of price increase with an innate fear. It is more than twice the rate promised by Chancellor Willy Brandt's Finance Minister Karl Schiller.

Such bread-and-butter issues, rather than the foreign policy of the Ostpolitik, are behind the Brandt government's dogged unpopularity. Not that West Germans have been indifferent to the treaty ratification crisis. Demonstrations, counter-demonstrations and rallies have been held in all major cities.

The highest television ratings have gone to live coverage of the Bundestag debates. Schools have dropped regular classes to tune in. Never before have the advantages of broadcasting the federal parliament been so blatantly obvious. A lot of this interest follows naturally from a national government on the brink of downfall, with the daily possiblity of plunging the country into a summer election.

Dark Foreboding

Apologists for the Brandt government's Ostpolitik have indeed given the impression that a dark fate awaits West Germany, should parliament be foolish enough to reject the treaties of friendship and nonaggression with Russia and Poland. West Germany would be isolated, I was solemnly told, and the whole process of East-West detente would come crashing down.

The best if not the only example of humor displayed by the politicians came from the Bavarian arch-opponent of the treaties, Franz-Josef Strauss. Asked what one government setback meant, he replied solemnly, "It means the end of the world."

Whatever the meaning of the treaties and the whole Ostpolitik movement, they have the virtue of forcing Germans to think hard about where they are going from here. Judging by the debate in the country they have yet to find their direction.

West Berliners, for example, explain that their free university has attracted West Germans for a number of reasons. One is that they are searching for something more than a full stomach. Or, if you like, they are fleeing the economic miracle for West Berlin which is forced to have a higher political consciousness as an island surrounded by East Germany.

It was interesting to listen to German students in discussions during the Bonn crisis. "To be German is a definition of power, nothing more," said one. He as a northerner felt no national kinship with the Bavarians. Another found himself more at home in Prague than in East Germany.

All the students pointed out that the German nation, politically, was no older than Canada. Yet the short history had brought two cataclysmic upheavals, leaving behind burdensome legacies.

WILLY BRANDT
... off the hook

A politician in Bonn told of a discussion in search of agreement on a national historical figure. The group was representative of the country today. "We had to go all the way back to Bach before we could all admire and accept one figure."

Some West Germans ask how they can keep alight the concept of one united German nation when they have systematically sealed themselves off from East Germany. That is the whole purpose of the treaties, according to the Bonn foreign office.

It is to stop the two Germanys drifting apart while keeping alive all possible contacts in the interests of the two sides feeling as one nation. Then in the distant future, who knows? The forces of peaceful self-determination may come into play.

Differences between the parties, reflecting the national confusion, arise from degrees of interpretation. The prospect of self-determination and eventual reunification is not much more than necessary theory to the coalition Social Democratic-Free Democratic government.

The opposition Christian Democrat-Christian Socialist grouping is more cautious. They want the Soviet Union to acknowledge that the treaties in no way constitute a peace treaty to the Second World War but are simply a modus vivendi, as Chancellor Brandt has often claimed.

Divisive Debate

This is notwithstanding the mutual undertaking in the Moscow treaty to respect the territorial integrity of all states in Europe and to renounce all territorial claims forever.

The Opposition has been trying to get an undertaking from Moscow recognizing the possibility of eventual peaceful accommodation — perhaps leading to confederation — between the two Germanys. Otherwise, it is feared, the treaty will mean something quite different in Bonn and Moscow, closing off a perspective irrevocably.

So far the Soviet government has been unwilling to take Mr. Brandt off the hook as it has before.

Opposition Leader Rainer Barzel can, with some justice, claim his party's prolonged campaign won significant additional points from the Soviets, including a generous agreement on travel between the two Germanys, and practical recognition for the first time of the European Common Market and West German participation in its development.

Despite Undertaking

Prospects that all parties might reach agreement on the treaties, combining in a common declaration, have declined since last week. Instead Germans are facing a sharp, divisive debate, on the fundamentals of their nationhood. After it is all over, with a close win possible for the government, they will be left with the divisions opened up by the treaties. The treaties will be open to two or three interpretations then as now.

There will be a need for national consensus then as now. In the long run the consequences of the unresolved German question could prove of more moment than a setback in detente which a treaty failure would herald.

ART STOTT

With Their Own Hands

The photographs on display in their clubhouse last Saturday night told part of the story of the South Vancouver Island Rangers' first quarter century. They were pictures of work parties engaged in Rangers' projects, including the trail over Mount Finlayson, individuals who had led the club and its different committees, trophy winners in its various outdoor competitions, and views of the grounds in the rough state existing when the organization took them over, with progress shots of improvements.

You looked at the photographs and then identified many of their subjects with the men in close fellowship, joined by their ladies, sipping wine and nibbling cheese at the function which marked the silver jubilee. Twenty-five years had made a difference. Most of the lean men of the early postwar had gained a little around the middle, lost a little on the top. And on wooden bars suspended from a plaque of simply dignity on one wall were the names of those for whom the bell had tolled.

War Years Association

To a man superficially acquainted with the club's inception, the evening was a journey into retrospect. It went back to the war years, when Vancouver Island, or at least the south of it, recognized the possibility of invasion from across the Pacific. In para-military, if not full military form, vigorous outdoorsmen of the community, sports fishermen and hunters, who knew the mountains, hills, valleys, streams and lakes of the region, were banded together under special army leadership into a force ready to fight enemy intrusion — potential guerrillas trained for defence.

From that close association, when peace came, emerged a group wishing to retain the contacts of shared experiences and anxious to preserve the outdoors fellowship of their training days. A random scrap of conversation Saturday night explained the simple, shared ideal:

"A hundred men got together, chipped in $60 apiece and bought this property. Then they set about making of it the headquarters and grounds they wanted. Everything that was done was done by volunteers. I worked on the well and on the building of the kitchen."

From the platform, during a brief, relatively informal program, came elaboration:

"When we came here, we had an old house, a creek, a lumpy field full of stumps and lots of ground. We worked on it. Everybody pitched in. Now we have these headquarters and we're proud of them. Proud of the way we built them, too."

Finlayson Trail Work Party

And another:

"When they decided to build the clubhouse, I told them I was ready to help just so long as I could work with my feet on the ground. They put me to nailing on the roof rafters, and I grew hooks on my toes and heels and my hands developed a permanent clutch."

From a former Ranger, returning as a visitor:

"The bridge over the creek on which we labored so hard is gone, replaced by a better one. I'm proud of the work we did and the improvements that have been made."

And from a founding-father:

"We had to cut down some trees, and my heart bled, but we've made the ranges for shooting we wanted and they're ideally situated. We've got the best picnic grounds around and, in addition to providing revenue, we can open them for people who can't afford the charge but need a day in the country."

Change with the Times

The reminiscences flowed. Honor was paid officers past and present. Life-memberships were presented to men for outstanding service. The demands of changing times were noted — regretful discontinuance of the junior branch, withdrawal from the search and rescue service as it was replaced by other agencies. But, pervading the talk, like the scent of the forest, came a dedication to conservation, preservation in amended form of the woodland, waterway and clearing that means so much to these men — an appreciation of natural space.

To the visitor acquainted with the Rangers, other thoughts came through. Here was a group of men, widely respected, who defined a worthwhile purpose and gave it practical form through their own efforts. What they have accomplished off the Luxton Road they did with their own hands, the strength of their backs, the foresight of their minds and a shared appreciation of their objective. What they have created is a physical asset of attraction and value beyond their own use.

The idea behind their achievement is probably more important. They have proved what can be done by people prepared to do it — not to sit back and wait for some beneficent government or other agency to provide what they want. That's an old-fashioned concept that bears repetition for today's society.

FROM OUR READERS

Why Discriminate?

Our prime minister has stated that it is a man's prerogative not to work. Therefore, it should also hold true that it's a man's prerogative not to support those non-workers with his taxation dollars. Also, it is an old-age pensioner's prerogative not to take in an ex-convict as a boarder in his home without implications of a jeopardized old-age pension.

Consequently, in the matter of prerogatives, if the federal government in its wisdom is intending to reward selected convicted criminals by paying them $1.75 per hour to work at specific jobs, then it must be the prerogative of the old-age pensioners to demand the same equivalent amount for an old-age pension. Also, the paid charitable workers, the low-income groups, welfare recipients, have every right to expect the same consideration as the criminal element.

If the convicted criminal is to be so rewarded, what about those good citizens whose only crime is the inability to secure employment, old age, physical disability, etc.? Go ahead, federal government, start this precedent, but ensure that it extends to all walks of life, and legislate it for all at the same time as you intend legislating a reward for crime. — D. S. Groves, 755 Gladiola Ave.

Protection

It is very disappointing to see that the various local municipalities have once again been completely cutting, or drastically reducing much-needed added manpower and equipment in our police and fire departments. It seems to me that the protection of lives and property should supersede anything else in any municipal budget, including the salaries of mayors, aldermen and staff.

I guess Mr. Editor that I have been naive enough to think that the days had finally passed when we had to wait for a disaster to occur before spending the money we should on the things that really matter above everything else. — "Alarmed."

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of May 11, 1912:

R. M. S. Empress of India, E. Beetham, R.N.R. commander, reached port early this afternoon after a good-weather trip from the Orient, bringing mails and a full cargo of silk, rice and Oriental products for Eastern Canada and United States points. There were 95 saloon passengers from the Orient on board, and a large number in the second cabin.

Among the passengers travelling in the saloon was Lady Salveson, the wife of Lord Salveson, a judge of the Scottish courts, and her son. They have been making an extended stay in the Orient and are now en route to their home in Scotland.

The Political 'Pro' Who Means to Be President

By ANTHONY HOWARD

(A former Washington correspondent for the London Observer, Howard recently was named editor of the New Statesman, replacing Laborite Richard Crossman.)

After his clear-cut victory in the Massachusetts primary and his impressive showing in Pennsylvania any other politician but George McGovern would surely now be recognised as the Democratic front runner. Yet strangely he is not.

Like Gene McCarthy four years ago, McGovern finds himself picking up the prizes only to be assured by all the wiseacres that the ultimate reward will never be his. Of course the press pundits and the party managers were right about McCarthy. Could they be wrong about McGovern?

The first thing to understand about McGovern is that his is no 'replated' McCarthy candidacy.

"The difference between Gene and me," McGovern once said in the middle of the 1968 campaign, "is that he really doesn't want to be President — and I do."

Bid for Irish Vote

In that sense all the repetitive adjectives used about McGovern — "quiet, soft-spoken, scholarly" — are singularly misleading. As a politician he has always been every inch the "pro" — from the time way back in the early 1950s when he created almost single-handed a Democratic Party in what was then one of the most rock-ribbed of Republican states, South Dakota, to the moment last month that he announced his support for Senator Kennedy's position on Ireland on the very day that he needed the Irish bloc vote in South Boston. If he is still not accepted as a party "regular," it is certainly not for want of trying on his part.

Met with Daley

The man who placed him in nonimation to be the Democratic nominee four years ago may have enraged Mayor Daley by announcing "With George McGovern as our candidate we would not have Gestapo tactics on the streets of Chicago": but that did not stop McGovern himself meeting secretly with Mayor Daley the next day and doing his best to extract from him what personal commitment he could for the future.

Nor, though it mightily offended a great number of his younger supporters, did McGovern himself shrink from holding Hubert Humphrey's hands aloft in the ritual final convention tribute to the party's nominee. It was McCarthy who chose to boycott that ceremony, not McGovern.

None of which is to argue that McGovern is without courage or, indeed, convictions. As long ago as 1951 he was calling for American recognition of Communist China and no one has ever matched in indignant intensity the onslaught that he made against the Vietnam war on the floor of the Senate in 1967.

McGOVERN
. . . messianic mission

One part of that speech may even today be worth quoting, if only as proof of his toughness under attack. McGovern had been charged by a fellow Senator with letting down the traditions of a "chamber which echoes with the courageous words of brave men now gone" and this was his reply:

"There are still brave men in the Senate and the Senator from Illinois isn't the only one. It doesn't require any particular bravery to stand on the floor of the Senate and urge our boys in Vietnam to fight harder, and if this war mushrooms into a major conflict and 100,000 Americans are killed, it won't be U.S. Senators who die."

Practical Streak

Naturally it is that kind of statement that now makes him the automatic beneficiary if the day should come when the North Vietnamese finally kick down the door and actually capture Saigon.

Yet with the strong convictions there goes a severely practical streak. When he is asked today about his initial opposition to draft card burning and his absence from the more militant peace movement demonstrations he simply and revealingly says: "What I was interested in was changing the policy not in making speeches."

Although he has improved on the campaign trail he is, in fact, not at all a good speaker. Where McCarthy was poetic he is prosaic (though at least thankfully not as verbose as his former friend and current rival, Hubert Humphrey).

Lacks Charisma

McGovern is quite without any of the magnetic political gifts — a fact that he recognises and tries hard not to resent. "I admit it would be nice," he once said, "if I had a few more exciting political qualities than I do" — then rather touchingly adding with wonderful Protestant prairies optimism "but I dare say these qualities will develop."

Even today McGovern is still the recognisable product of America's Middle Western Bible belt. Not only was his father a minister — so initially was he, if in a different denomination (the regular Methodists rather than the more fundamentalist Wesleyan variety).

But although he abandoned the ministry very early on for teaching — and then teaching for politics — the early conditioning and upbringing still show through. Not only is his Senate office decorated with religious texts: he also commended Charles Reich's The Greening of America as "one of the most exciting books I have ever read" apparently on the ground that "what it all boils down to is the simple old values that my father and my Sunday school teachers taught me 40 years ago."

It is, no doubt, this kind of uncritical piety that causes a lot more sophisticated liberals to sneer at McGovern. He will never command the adulation accorded to Adlai Stevenson or, indeed, the devotion first inspired and then spurned by Eugene McCarthy. Like Hubert Humphrey he is the child of rural America — a hero for the homespun rather than an idol for the fastidious.

Yet it is the latter arguably that he aspires to be. When he was already a contender for th Democratic nomination he was once invited at short notice to a dinner party given by the editor of the New Republic in honor of that intellectual doyen of American journalists, Mr. Walter Lippmann. Although he had out-of-town engagements McGovern had no hesitation. "For Mr. Lippmann," he explained with bated breath to his prospective host, "I would drop anything."

Rise to Occasion

There are, in fact some suprising dimensions to George McGovern. No one who heard him in the candidates debate before the Californian delgation at Chicago in August 1968 can have any doubts that he is capable of rising to an occasion. And, in a strange way, that perhaps is what he has done in the campaign so far this year.

For 15 months his candidacy seemed permanently moored in the shallows and miseries: there was no discernible demand even for campaign buttons and his own staff began to fear that whatever they had backed it was certainly not a winner. McGovern himself, however, never lost his nerve even when the going was roughest. As one of his aides put it, "It was almost as if his own sense of messianic mission protected him from everything."

Teddy Endorsement ?

Whether that sense of mission proves to be justified will probably ultimately depend on Teddy Kennedy. Now that McGovern has won such a massive victory in the Kennedys' own fief of Massachusetts, there can really be no further excuse for Teddy withholding what he should have delivered long ago, a formal endorsement.

The allegation, of course, all along has been that McGovern is merely a stalking horse for yet another Kennedy bid for power: but those, like Joseph Alsop, who persist in peddling this theory cannot know their George McGovern. He is not a man to be easily pushed aside by anybody — least of all by the politician for whom he has already served as a stand-in once.

What too few people understand about George McGovern is that he seriously means to be President. Since he is, in his own words, "the natural antithesis to Richard Nixon" the Democrats, if only they were sensible, would surely let him try.

What Price a Vote?

By DALTON CAMP

Among today's anxious, pressing questions is: "How much should a candidate running for public office — for the House of Commons, say — be allowed to spend for his campaign?"

It is the view of the print media these days that election campaign expenses should be limited, that the names of all contributors should be disclosed and the amount of their gift as well, and, of course, that the federal treasury should be obliged to finance some part of the candidate's expenses by direct subsidy.

Of course, one of my difficulties in accommodating myself to this present fetish of the media, thereby qualifying as being among the fashionably cerebral political thinkers, is my suspicion that the print media resent the capacity of political parties and their candidates to use television and radio to diminish the editorial bias and influence of the press.

It could be argued that if the political parties were limited in their use of media to advance their own interest, then the influence of the press upon their electoral prospects would be considerably greater.

As matters now stand, we have achieved a sort of rough equality and balance among the various powers of influence and persuasion. If a political party, or a candidate, has a worthy purpose or valid argument to make to the electorate, and if such is deemed unworthy or invalid by the press, the party or the politician nevertheless has the opportunity to appeal to the electorate by purchasing time and space to state his case.

Based on some considerable experience and observation, I have not found it true that newspaper publishers, editors, and political reporters are divinely endowed with superior wisdom. No more so, at least, than your average politician. So, it could be argued, why increase the influence of one and diminish that of the other?

But about the rhetorical argument that campaign expenditures be "limited" — I presume this to mean that they be limited by law, which presumes, in the first place, that someone has some idea of a precise limitation and also presumes that such a limitation could be enforced.

No one is anxious to say what the limitation should be, and there is abundant evidence that it could not — or would not — be adequately enforced. For example, the present law as it applies to reporting election expenses is either incapable of enforcement or there is a common conspiracy not to enforce it.

For example, the Elections Act requires all candidates, successful or otherwise, to report their campaign expenses, and it is an "illegal practice" not to do so. Failure to report is punishable by a fine up to $1,000 or imprisonment up to one year. But, in fact, there were 250 candidates in the 1968 federal election who did not report their expenses, and there is not a single example of any action being taken.

Whether or not individual candidates spend too much getting themselves elected or defeated is, I suggest, something for the candidates and their supporters to ruminate upon. There is, despite the piety of the self-designated reformers, little evidence that money buys electoral happiness.

In the 1968 campaign, thirteen candidates declared campaign expenditures of more than $30,000. Seven of these high-rollers were Liberals, six of them were elected and four of them were or became cabinet ministers (Richardson, $50,000; Kierans, $37,000; Munro, $36,000; Marchand, $33,000.) The other Liberal winners were Kaplan ($68,000) and Major ($66,000). Six of the remaining were Conservatives, myself included ($38,000), but only one was elected — Frank Moores, now Premier of Newfoundland, who spent $50,000 winning a seat in Parliament.

Robert B. Major presents an interesting case in point: he defeated Roger Regimbal, who was the previous member, in the Quebec seat of Argenteuil. Based on the total vote in that contest, Mr. Major's successful campaign cost him about $2.05 an elector, which might be a high price to pay for a Liberal to get himself elected in a Quebec seat in a Trudeau landslide.

I suspect that Mr. Major's victory might have been, per capita, the most expensive in Canada. Mr. Regimbal, who lost, spent $29,500 — or about ninety-two cents per head. I doubt, somehow, that he could have done any better if he had spent five times that amount.

MOORES
. . . $50,000 to win

Anyway, the value judgment is not, thank heavens, made by the press, or by the government, or by anyone other than the candidate, his campaign committee, and his supporters. The same is true for all of them — winners and losers, alike.

The fact remains that we have a relatively free party system in which candidates are allowed to spend what they think is worth their prospects and according to their needs, as they see them, and, as well, according to the willingness of their supporters to assist them. Why the taxpayers should be obliged to do so, as some would have it, eludes me.

Nor am I impressed by the arguments of incumbent members of Parliament who, once in office, are eager to limit campaign expenses. Of course they are; to do so enhances their prospects of surviving, for they have four glorious years to enjoy their franking privileges, milk the media, and endear themselves to their electors.

Nothing could so well maintain the status quo in the Parliament of Canada and guarantee the perpetuity of whomever is now there (mostly Liberals) than to limit and inhibit the efforts of all or any who want to throw them out.

THOSE WHISPERED LITTLE BIGOTRIES

THE TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

If the election is going to provide sensible debate, there's some preliminary business to be tackled now. All the major parties should play their part in cutting down the hostile popular mythology about Quebec and French Canadians that appears to be reaching dangerous proportions in some parts of English Canada.

You know the mythology we mean: you may have heard it at work or in the corner bar. A resentment against Quebec's prominence in national controversy, always latent among us, is being fanned by whispered little bigotries. "Quebec's getting too much," these whispers say, "the tail is wagging the dog."

Canadians, we believe, feel instinctively that federalism has something to do with sharing. But they are not free from prejudice. And these whispers do insidious harm.

The best way to fight them is to meet them head on, as John Roberts, the young MP for York-Simcoe, has done.

In a letter to his constituents, Mr. Roberts took the sting out of the poison — simply by stating the facts. It is the best approach.

Look at some of his examples:

The whisperers say there are too many French Canadians in the cabinet. They are wrong: only 27 per cent of the cabinet (against 28 per cent of the population) is French speaking.

Quebec, they say, gets more than its share of equalization payments. Wrong: Quebec gets $74 per head per year against Saskatchewan's $102 and Newfoundland's $213.

Quebec, they say, gets the lion's share of regional expansion grants, which sometimes create jobs. Wrong again: in 1971-72 Quebec, with more than 30 per cent of the nation's unemployed, received only 26 per cent of the grants.

Who's for Electronic Yoga?

By JULES ASHER

At first glance he might be mistaken for just another teen-ager listening to his transistor radio through earphones. But a closer look reveals that it isn't a radio.

He's an "alpha head."

Wires dangling from electrodes under his headband are feeding faint electrical impulses from his brain into the transistorized device. It transforms them into a tone. He hears a tweeting sound when he has reached a relaxed, detached state in which his attention has shifted inward, away from the outside world.

The name of the game: "alpha control."

★ ★ ★

The object: To attain an "alpha high" by producing the tweeting tone — the sound of amplified alpha brainwaves. Its presence lets him know that he's succeeding in thinking himself into a state of mind and body usually accompanied by an increased output of alpha waves.

He's into the latest turn-on, a kind of electronic yoga.

The device cost him $275. Its advertisement promises many and varied applications: "This modern technique can be used to raise consciousness and awareness, reduce anxiety, increase problem-solving abilities and creativity, control emotions and habits such as overweight and smoking."

★ ★ ★

More than two dozen small electronics firms — most of them on the west coast — are currently advertising such portable "alpha control" machines in newspapers and popular psychology magazines. "Mind control" and other self-improvement programs using the alpha jargon, but not the machines, have become a multi-million dollar industry.

All hope to capitalize on an incipient popular interest in an infant but promising science.

Bio-feedback (short for biological feedback) is a method for learning conscious control of one's otherwise involuntary bodily processes — such as brain waves, subtle muscle tensions, heart rate and skin temperature — by practising with sensitive instruments similar to lie-detector machine.

These electronic mirrors of internal events provide continuous audio or visual monitoring of how well one is doing in gaining control of the bodily function being mastered, thus facilitating its mastery. After a few weeks or months of bio-feedback training, the student can maintain this control—without the help of the machine.

The technique promises to challenge drugs as a treatment for psychosomatic medical problems like headaches and ulcers. It may also prove valuable in controlling anxiety and enhancing creativity.

Many of the approximately 2,000 scientists now working in this field are irked by the growth of the pop-cult "alpha" industry. They fear unsuspecting persons are being hoodwinked into buying unperfected brainwave feedback devices and misleading training programs.

'Modest' Profits For Early Birds

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The Vancouver mining boom may be making a new crop of millionaires in Vancouver, but profits of Victoria speculators are a little more modest.

Harvey Bailey, manager of Doherty, Roadhouse and McCuaig, for example, says that his registered representatives report profits in the $10,000 to $20,000 range by Victoria investors who got in early on such stocks as Afton which went from less than a dollar to more than $12 and Leemac which went from pennies to more than $4.

★ ★ ★

This is a good profit but such stories, he said, should not induce people to toss in their jobs and try to make a full-time living by sitting in board rooms and watching the prices change.

"To begin with these mining booms are few and far between. It has been at least three years since we had the last big one," he noted.

Big profits can be made on the penny mines and oils but there were big risks, too.

"It is a fairly dangerous game. It would be a very tough way to make a living."

Bailey said that even the professional floor traders who can buy and sell stocks without paying a commission have to be alert to end up on the profit side of the ledger.

And if they find it difficult, it is even more so for the amateur trader who is hit with a 2½ to 3 per cent commission every time they buy and every time they sell.

Speculation is best done by persons engaged in other full-time employment who can afford to take risks and who take the time to study the market before buying and selling.

Cases of widows and orphans making a quick million through astute buying of stocks are few and far between.

A few businessmen have earned a quick mini-fortune of $15,000 or $20,000 by watching the market and being lucky.

'Too Much Talking'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The harsh reality of Pacific rim trade is that there is too much talk and not enough action, says the executive vice-president of Canadian Liquid Air Ltd.

John S. Walton told the Purchasing and Management Association of Canada that, "in spite of the new bulk cargo port at Roberts Bank, in spite of those giant mines and forest industry complexes that owe their B.C. life to Pacific rim trade, the potential is far from being realized."

He said it is "unusual" to find that B.C. does not have a trade office in Japan, which is its single best overseas customer. Walton said the province's only foothold overseas is B.C. House in London.

Canadian Pacific Appointments

W. J. STENASON — R. T. RILEY

Appointment of W. J. Stenason as vice-president administration and R. T. Riley as vice-president transport and telecommunications for Canadian Pacific is announced by Ian D. Sinclair, chairman and chief executive officer. In his new position, Mr. Stenason will retain jurisdiction over the company's ocean shipping activities which he held previously as vice-president transport and ships. Mr. Riley, formerly director corporate planning, will be responsible for Canadian Pacific's trucking and telecommunications operations. ***

Hugh Russel

Hugh Russel Limited, industrial distributor, reports record sales and earnings for the three month period ended March 31, 1972. Sales of $19,076,595 are up 35 per cent over sales of the comparable period in 1971 of $14,164,912.

Net earnings on $333,768 or 44 cents per common share establishes a new first quarter earnings record and compare with earnings of $61,516 or one cent per common share for the first quarter 1971.

Interprovincial

Interprovincial Pipe Line Co. reports a rise in earnings of almost 23 per cent for the first three months of 1972.

Net earnings for the first quarter were $10,551,000 or 41 cents a share compared with $8,596,000 or 34 cents in the same period in 1971.

Revenue for the quarter this year was $42,434,000 compared with $37,010,000 last year.

Lochiel

Lochiel Exploration Ltd. earned $138,424 or 2.6 cents a share during the year ended Jan. 31, compared with a loss of $825,422 or 19.3 cents a share the corresponding period.

An extraordinary loss of $757,952 was included in the 1970-71 fiscal report from a "write-down of investment" in Petromines Ltd.

Cash flow increased to $300,000 or 5.6 cents a share, up from a loss of $52,000 or 1.2 cents a share.

McIntyre Mines

McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd. reports a loss for the first quarter of the year. J. K. Godin, 60, president and chief executive officer also announced he is resigning. He gave no reason.

R. B. Fulton succeeded him as the company's president and chief executive officer.

For the three months ended March 30, McIntyre had a loss of $1,505,000 or 62 cents a share, compared with a profit of $943,000 or 39 cents a share during the corresponding period last year.

Godin said the loss was directly attributable to the company's coal operation at Smoky River, Alta., although investment income also dropped $500,000, relecting lower Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. dividends. McIntyre holds a 37-per-cent interest in Falconbridge.

The coal division showed a loss for the quarter of $2,063,000.

TIRES

The inside story

BIAS PLY
How it's made:
This conventional type of tire construction has 2, 4 or more overlapping fabric plies that run under the tread and around the tire at an angle from the centre line. The fabric plies can be rayon, nylon or polyester, but all four plies are made of the same fabric. Fabric types are never mixed in bias ply construction.

How it works:
Bias ply tires give you reasonably good strength, control and road handling. Bias construction tires absorb road shocks, and provide a soft quiet ride. Compared with newer construction types, conventional bias tires are more subject to "squirming" under the tread, thereby contributing to greater heat build-up and tire wear.

BELTED
How it's made:
As with conventional bias tires, overlapping fabric plies run under the tread at an angle. But these fabric body plies are then reinforced with two thicker fabric or steel belts that also run around the circumference of the tire under the tread. In belted construction, the fabric body plies can be nylon or polyester, while the belts can be rayon, fibreglass or even steel.

How it works:
Compared to the bias tire, the belted tire is slightly rougher riding at low speeds but the belts lock the tire in a rounder shape, greatly decreasing tire squirm and heat build-up. Belted tires have much more impact and road hazard resistance, better high speed performance, more traction and stability, and tread wear is decreased significantly.

Some common tire terms explained:
Bead: Rings of strong steel wires, wrapped in rubber and fabric, that fit snugly against both sides of the wheel rim and anchor the tire there.
Cord: Fibre material that goes into making up the ply of a tire. Cords are dipped in latex solution to ensure bonding between plies. Cords used today are Nylon, Polyester and Rayon.
Pliies: Layers of parallel fabric cords coated with latex insulated by rubber, and running across the tire at various angles from bead to bead forming the tire carcass.
Belts: Layers of fabric or wire placed on top of or between the carcass plies under the tread between the shoulders. It stabilizes the tire into a "rounder" round, imparting unique performance qualities.

Hudson Heads Burrard

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fifty-four-year-old J. William Hudson Wednesday was elected president and chief executive officer of Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd., replacing Clarence Wallace who is retiring.

Hudson's election was part of a major corporate shuffle that saw a new board of directors emerge. George B. McKeen, president of McKeen and Wilson Ltd. and chairman of Rivtow Straits Ltd., was named chairman of Burrard.

Other board members are: Peter Paul Saunders, president of Cornat Industries Ltd.; W. E. Donnelly, executive vice-president of Cornat, R. E. P. Allan, assistant general manager of the Bank of British Columbia; Peter J. G. Bentley, executive vice-president of Canadian Forest Products; Ronald L. Cliff, president of B.C. Transformer Co. Ltd., and Roderick M. Hungerford, president of Flexlox Industries.

Major Exchanges Agree to Co-Operate

TORONTO (CP) — A notice from the Toronto Stock Exchange to its members says agreement has been reached for greater co-ordination between major exchanges in several areas of stock market operation.

The plans are the result of a five-day study session for senior officers of the Toronto, Vancouver and two Montreal exchanges, and the Investment Dealers' Association.

The closed meetings concluded Tuesday in Florida.

The notice says steps will be taken to achieve:

—Uniform requirements for minimum capital to operate a brokerage firm;

—Co-ordination of market surveillance and trading practices;

—Technology to provide market information on all exchanges;

—Improved procedures for handling certain types of trading, such as transactions involving large blocks of stock.

The notice says the purpose of the study session was to find ways of increasing the effectiveness of securities markets "operating in the public interest and maintaining within the country the principal market for trading Canadian securities."

OPEN MEMBERSHIP

There was also agreement at the Florida session for studies on certain areas of market operations, including ways to make membership in all exchanges more available to a member of any one exchange.

Studies also are planned on ways of simplifying execution of customers' orders at the best available price and allowing traders to make a greater contribution to market liquidity.

Those attending the meeting, which was held at Boca Raton, a resort north of Fort Lauderdale on the Atlantic coast, included John Kimber, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange; two Toronto Stock Exchange vice-presidents; 11 of the 13 members of the Toronto Stock Exchange's board of governors; Thomas Dohm, president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange; Alan Thompson, president of the Investment Dealers' Association, and Jacques Dupuis, executive vice-president of the Montreal Stock Exchange.

The meeting was called primarily to review a report from a Toronto Stock Exchange committee. The committee, selected from the exchange membership, was asked to examine the Canadian securities market and make recommendations to the board of governors to assist it in long-term planning.

Changes Later

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney said today he is not ready to say when the new liquor regulations will go into effect.

He said a decision may be made before he leaves for a vacation-business trip May 19 but that decision will not necessarily be announced before he leaves. The new laws, passed during the last session of the legislature, would extend drinking hours in beverage rooms and cocktail lounges, allow the serving of liquor in beverage rooms and extend the operating hours of government liquor stores.

Dramatic Trade Switch Spurred Crisis

MONTREAL (CP)—The export trade of the United States and the United Kingdom has dropped about 20 per cent in 20 years.

At the same time, the export trade of Italy, Japan and Germany has increased 20 per cent. In latter years, Canada also has been reporting a surplus in its trade—the difference between what it sells overseas and what it imports.

This dramatic switch in world trade has upset the whole pattern of international trade and, along with it, the international monetary system. Money is involved because funds have to be switched around when goods are bought and sold.

In brief, that is the crux of what now is known as the "trade problem" associated with reform of the monetary system. The whole issue was brought into sharp focus last August when the U.S., running heavy deficits, took stringent economic measures to stem the flow.

The U.S. measures led in December to a realignment of major world currencies and renewed trade talks between the U.S. and its major trading partners.

CANADA STILL OUT

But Canada—the best customer of the U.S. and also the biggest exporter to the U.S.—still has not concluded a new trade pact.

International monetary policy is a complicated matter but, in the final analysis, even the little man will feel the results.

After the December currency value realignment, for instance, the Japanese yen was revalued. As a result, it now costs about 10 per cent more than previously to buy a Japanese-made car in Canada.

That was part of the U.S. idea—to make imports more expensive and thus tend to come closer to balancing its trade with the world.

But it is a long process that will take years.

This is one of the questions being discussed here in closed session by the International Monetary Conference, composed of the top bankers and finance officials of 20 non-Communist nations.

NO DEAL YET

So far there isn't even unanimous agreement that trade should be considered part of monetary reform, although the majority appear to lean to that approach. Canada is one that supports that view.

Leslie C. Peacock, president of Crocker National Bank of the U.S., supported this approach at Wednesday's meeting:

"There can be no resolving one without resolving the other."

Gaylord Freeman, chairman of the First National Bank of Chicago, said free access to world markets leads to conflicting emotions.

"It is a source of comfort to each nation to know that it can compete in foreign markets—but a source of concern that other nations can also enter and compete in its market.

"The natural result is that each government has on one or more occasion sought to 'have its cake and eat it, too' by restricting its markets to foreigners."

This, he said, means that each nation is continuously torn "by the conflict between idealism and selfishness."

Peter Flanigan, executive director of President Nixon's council on international economic policy, outlined some of the world developments that led to the U.S. problems. He mentioned specifically the growing Canadian surplus under the U.S.-Canada automobile pact, long a sore point in the stalled trade talks.

James Grandy, deputy minister of trade and industry, repeated Canada's position that the Canadian trade surplus has been due to natural economic growth, that the surplus has come only after years of deficits, and that trade figures alone don't tell the whole story because there is an outflow of funds from Canada to pay dividends and so on to American parent firms with subsidiaries in Canada.

The IMC is not designed to come to any agreements, being primarily a forum for an exchange of ideas. But one conclusion already has emerged—that there should be greater flexibility of exchange rates.

BCR Again Shows Operating Profit

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Railway — formerly the Pacific Great Eastern Railway — recorded a net profit, after provision for interest and depreciation, of $989,569 last year, up from $986,923 the year before.

Vice-President J. S. Broadbent said in an annual report that the government-owned company's carloadings reached 119,976 in 1971, up from 106,404 in the previous year.

Predicting a record year for the railway, Broadbent said that industries starting up this year in the area served by the BCR include a $74 million copper concentrate mill at McLeese Lake, 30 miles north of Williams Lake, a $75 million pulp mill and sawmill expansion at Quesnel and an $85 million pulp mill, steel mill and veneer plant project at Mackenzie, north of Prince George.

Broadbent said the railway's track expansion program also is on schedule, with work continuing on a 300-mile extension to the west of Fort Nelson and a 420-mile extension from Fort St. James to Dease Lake.

The company added seven new diesel locomotives last year to bring its fleet to 74 engines, and another 10 will be added this year. It is also buying 200 chip cars, 570 boxcars and 50 gondola cars.

Broadbent said freight traffic accounts for almost 90 per cent of the railway's total revenues and slightly more than half of the freight revenue is from hauling forest products.

Unilingual Beans Start Suit

MONTREAL (CP) — Steinberg's Ltd. supermarket chain has been charged with having cans of beans with unilingual labels on the shelves.

The charge was laid Tuesday after a group of University of Montreal 1972 law graduates launched a campaign against English-only labels.

Lawyer Jean Gagné, who represents the graduates, said the charge is "only the beginning — nine other charges, all against Steinberg's, will be laid."

MPs Rush Into Pension Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — Sidestepping Commons rules, MPs jumped into debate on old-age pension increases Wednesday as the opposition welcomed the windfall for pensioners but called it a cynical election gambit by the Liberals.

All parties agreed to set aside the minimum three days usually required to bring a bill to debate in the House, with the aim of bringing the increases to 1.8 million pensioners by June.

Companion legislation increasing veterans' pensions also is planned for passage by the Commons next week. Both measures were included in the budget Finance Minister John Turner brought down Monday.

The current old age pension, given to everybody 65 and over, is $80 monthly. For the neediest, there is a supplement up to $55 a month for single pensioners and up to $95 for couples.

Under present law, those receiving supplements get a two-per-cent increase in their pensions when the cost of living rises that much or more in a year.

HAS 2 CHANGES

The government bill contains two major changes.

First, it would apply the cost-of-living increase to all pensioners, not just those getting supplements.

Second, the increase would reflect the actual increase in the cost of living, not limited to two per cent. For several years the cost of living has increased by more than two per cent, leaving pensioners with declining purchasing power.

The increases would be retroactive to Jan. 1, and the government hopes June pension cheques will include the extra pensions earned in the first six months of the year.

The supplements are being increased $15 a month for single pensioners and $30 a month for couples. That would bring the maximum pension to $150 a month for singles and $285 for couples.

Opposition MPs recalled past government rejection of their pleas to match all pension increases to the actual cost of living.

They said the government turn-around is intended to lure voters for a summer election.

OK FARM BILL

Before debate started on the pensions, the Commons gave second-reading approval and sent to the agriculture committee a bill to provide broader lending powers to the Farm Credit Corp. and authorize the Crown corporation—which lends money to farmers to expand their properties—to buy and sell farmland.

Opening the pension debate, Welfare Minister John Munro recited government measures to help pensioners and said the government always had planned to raise the ceiling on living cost increases if the two per cent proved inadequate.

"We are delivering on that promise today."

He called it a great step in support of the elderly, adding that Canada treats its senior citizens better than just about any country in the free world.

Jack Marshall (PC—Humber - St. George's - St. Barbe) agreed the bill is a good idea, but wondered at the government change of heart.

On March 22 the Liberals defeated a Conservative motion calling for increases to match living-cost increases.

"Suddenly . . . the minister has discovered that old-age pensioners deserve a better break and a more just cost of living increase in their payments, just as we argued . . ." Mr. Marshall said.

A conversion is better late than never, he added, but "few deathbed conversions have ever saved a dying patient's life, and this late move is unlikely to save a dying Liberal government."

STAN CALLS IT CRASS

The bill should be passed quickly to benefit pensioners, but it is clear the government plans to call an election perhaps for July 17 when pensioners have their big June cheques still in memory.

Mr. Marshall offered an amendment to give pensioners a bonus to reflect living-cost increases since 1967, when the two-per-cent provision took effect.

$4,000 WEEKLY TV GUIDE LOSS

It will cost TV Guide magazine $4,000 a week to comply with the provincial government ban on cigarette and liquor advertising.

The magazine's Western Canadian manager, R. A. Northrop of Vancouver, said Wednesday TV Guide's color feature section will continue to be published in Philadelphia.

There will be two changes.

One will eliminate liquor and cigarette ads from the Western Canadian edition for southwestern B.C., which will be reduced in size to the extent of the ads.

The second will affect the B.C.-Alberta edition for the Kootenays and Alberta. Ads will be removed from magazines sold in the Kootenays but kept in those sold in Alberta.

Northrop said the feature sections will then be imported, as in the past, by McMurray Publishing Co. of Toronto, and assembled at Evergreen Press in Vancouver.

Evergreen Press will continue printing the magazine's Western Canadian, B.C.-Alberta and Saskatchewan-Manitoba editions, the last still carrying full liquor and cigarette ads.

A recent Western Canadian edition was issued without the usual color section but Northrop said the magazine will have the regular features next week, including the standard cover.

Mixed Pattern In House Starts

Single dwelling starts were up during January and February but down in March at 128 (compared with 198 last March) leaving the area ahead for the quarter with 666 starts compared with 530 in the first quarter of 1971.

The statistics, released today by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, show a mixed pattern for the province as well. Total starts were down 4 per cent, total single family starts were up 12 per cent and starts on multiple family units were down 11 per cent.

In the Victoria area, duplexes were at 23 starts during March compared with 48 last March but up to 184 for the first three months of 1972 compared with 149 last year.

Row and apartment units in the Victoria area also showed the same mixed pattern of being down in March but up for the quarter. There were 105 starts in March (150 last March) and 482 during the quarter (381) last year.

All major urban areas in B.C. report an increase in single family dwellings over the three-month period, despite the slackening pace in March.

In multiple starts during the first three months, there were increases in Victoria, Kamloops, Kelowna, Penticton and in the City of Vancouver but metropolitan Vancouver was down, particularly Surrey.

Tug to Be Raised

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — An attempt will probably be made to raise the tug Haro Strait, Transport Minister Donald Jamieson indicated in the Commons Wednesday.

The tugboat sank in a gale February 27 off Point Roberts, drowning the crew of five.

Tommy Douglas (NDP — Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands) asked Jamieson whether an official inquiry had been launched into the sinking.

Jamieson said he believed formal papers setting up inquiry commission has been signed.

Unique Reference Book

Secondary schools in B.C. this month will receive the latest edition of a unique Canadian reference book as a result of a Centennial project launched five years ago by Simpsons-Sears Limited.

The firm will donate the third book in the Dictionary of Canadian Biography series.

Twenty volumes will be required to bring the series up to the present period. It is expected to take 15 years to complete.

Work on the first volume started in 1959 and to date more than 250 researchers and historians have contributed to the work.

Rare Applause for Rowdyman

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Applause is rare in a movie theatre, but it was given in generous quantity Wednesday night following a showing of The Rowdyman, the first feature film ever made in Newfoundland.

About 500 persons attended the special preview showing of the film, which has its official world premiere in St. John's, Nfld., May 18.

The movie was shown here as part of the annual Guelph Spring Festival. Earlier in the day, more than 700 persons, about one-third of them school children let out especially for the occasion, saw Claude Jutra's Mon Uncle Antoine, the Quebec film that was named best Canadian film of 1971.

HAD FEDERAL AID

Canadian Gordon Pinsent, a native of Newfoundland, who both wrote and starred in The Rowdyman, was scheduled to be present but missed his plane in New York.

The movie, shot in Corner Brook and St. John's, was produced for under $350,000 with the Canadian Film Development Corp. putting up half and the rest of the money coming from Crawley Films of Ottawa and Agincourt Productions of Toronto.

American actors Will Geer and Frank Converse have supporting roles in the film.

Pinsent is best known in this country as the star of Quentin Durgens, MP, the CBC television series of a few years back. He has made several movies in the U.S., including The Thomas Crown Affair, Colossus, The Forbin Project in which he played a U.S. president and, most recently, Blackula, the first black horror picture.

Dane, a native of Masson, Que., who has been acting in American TV shows for the last six years, said that after the St. John's premiere The Rowdyman will open in five Newfoundland theatres May 19, in Toronto May 26 and in Ottawa June 1.

He said a U.S. distributor has not been found yet.

After a preview showing a few weeks ago in Los Angeles, Charles Champlin, entertainment editor of the Los Angeles Times, described the movie as "vivid, off-trail, very funny, well-made, sexy, adult, intelligent" and Pinsent's performance as "excellent and charismatic."

Wednesday night's audience seemed to agree.

Anderson Wants 'Strong SC Riding'

Esquimalt-Saanich M.P. David Anderson, a contender of the provincial Liberal leadership, said Wednesday he plans to seek election to the legislature in a strong Social Credit riding.

He ruled out the Saanich-Gulf Islands riding of Socred MLA John Tisdalle, because Tisdalle "is perhaps the weakest candidate and I should run against the strongest candidate."

Anderson hasn't decided, however, what riding he will contest.

He made the comments at a joint Victoria-Esquimalt Liberal association meeting.

Anderson has already indicated he likely will seek the Liberal nomination in one of the Greater Victoria area ridings, if his bid for the provincial leadership is successful next weekend. The leadership, being vacated by Dr. Pat McGeer, will be decided at a convention in Penticton May 20 and 21.

Anderson also told his supporters if his bid for the top spot in the provincial party is a success he will not be as intellectual as McGeer.

Quoting a broadcast suggestion that McGeer's leadership was too cerebral, Anderson promised "that's one thing I promise you I won't be."

He also said he will work to correct the disunity of the Liberal party in B.C. and will travel extensively throughout the province.

WILD GIRL TALE JUST A LOT OF BULL

ADELAIDE (Reuter) — The "Nullarbor Nymph," the near-naked, blonde-haired girl rumored to run with kangaroos in the Australian bush, was revealed Wednesday night to be a hoax.

The story of a wild girl on the Nullarbor plains of western Australia gained worldwide attention when first reported earlier this year.

"The Nullarbor Nymph was a lot of bull," said Laurie Scott, one of the men who invented the nymph, said in an interview.

Scott, kangaroo shooter, rabbit trapper and fisherman, said the idea of the nymph had been invented in the pub at Eucla, 898 miles east of Perth.

"We were all sitting in the pub at Eucla, drinking on, when someone suggested the idea," Scott said.

He said the girl chosen as the nymph, and who was photographed on the dry, dusty plains near Eucla, was a local blonde, Genice Brooker.

Scott said the man behind the whole idea from the start was Geoff Pearce, public relations man and former journalist. Pearce had controlled the publicity for the hoax on a worldwide basis.

"The rumor spread like wildfire, and bus drivers and their passengers all ended up believing they had seen something," Scott said.

It was decided that "proof" would have to be furnished, so the locals made a film of Genice, in a kangaroo-skin skirt and skin-colored bikini, running among some kangaroos.

CRIMINALS FIND HAVEN

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's immigration laws are turning the country into a haven for foreign criminals, say a number of police and immigration officials.

In a series of interviews with The Star, the officials complained that criminals have little trouble getting into Canada. If ordered deported, they can stall for months, possibly years, through appeals.

And if finally deported, they can simply return to Canada.

Some have been deported seven or eight times without penalty.

"In police circles the immigration department is regarded as little more than a bad joke," said Clem Hill, who until a year ago was in charge of the RCMP intelligence squad in Toronto.

Sergeant of Detectives James Noble said Metropolitan Toronto police have almost given up trying to get undesireables deported. Now they advise United States authorities to follow the more costly and time-consuming process of extradition.

A senior official in the immigration department said:

"The plain truth is that we have no immigration policy.

"We let anyone in, criminals, anybody. Immigration has become a political football and everybody is scared of upsetting the ethnic vote or of being called racist."

Bryce Mackasey, federal minister of manpower and immigration, said: "I'm bothered too."

An Unmentioned Sting Hidden In Turner's No-Hike Budget

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Finance Minister John Turner imposed no new income taxes in his budget this week — but he failed to protect taxpayers against increases which will automatically take effect at year's end.

Last October the then finance minister, Edgar Benson, announced tax cuts of three per cent for income tax and seven per cent for corporation taxes on a temporary basis.

The reductions continue only until Dec. 31 this year at which time taxes will go back to their former level.

Turner made no mention at all of the impending tax rise, and legally there was no necessity for him to do so, but he could have extended the time period or made the cuts permanent.

But he did not.

RIGHT, BUT . . .

It can quite rightly be said that there were no income tax increases in this week's budget but the tax hike is pending, anyway, as a built-in factor of the previous budget.

The two announcements made by Benson last October which apply are:

"An income tax cut of three per cent for all Canadians retroactive to July 1, 1971, and ending Dec. 31, 1972. A corporation tax cut of seven per cent retroactive to July 1, 1971, and ending Dec. 31, 1972."

This means income taxes will be increased three per cent next year. This works out to $15 for each $1,000 of tax paid.

NET GAIN

Corporations, on the other hand will score a net gain as a result of taxation changes — despite the end of the seven per cent reduction at the end of the year.

In the case of a corporation which has a taxable income of $435,000 next calendar year, it would have been faced with taxes of $190,300. This fugure would have been reduced to $176,979 if the seven per cent reduction had been extended beyond the end of 1972.

But the reduction in the top corporation tax rate to 40 per cent will give the same corporation a tax of $167,350.

So despite the end of the seven per cent reduction, corporations have come out with a net reduction in taxes.

The corporation rate on $435,000 is based upon a tax of 21 per cent on the first $35,000 plus the full 40 per cent on the remainder.

The old seven per cent reduction permitted by the Benson mini-budget of October is worked out as a reduction of 7 per cent on tax payable—except that the old-age security tax portion of the corporation levy is not eligible for the seven per cent reduction.

This means the seven per cent reduction is worked out on the figure of 18 per cent of the first $35,000 and 46 per cent of the remainder (as in each case the old age security tax) is a flat three per cent.

WARD FULL BEFORE OPENING

When Premier Bennett officially opens the addition to Lady Minto Hospital on Salt Spring Island May 19, he will find the 15 new beds there already occupied.

The addition to the 25-bed hospital is for extended care patients, mostly elderly who require constant nursing for long-term illnesses.

Hospital administrator Harold Hoffman said today six or seven extended care patients had been occupying acute care beds and so were moved into the addition May 1. The balance of the new beds were filled from a waiting list of about 15, meaning there are still a few on the waiting list.

The addition, some renovations and work on a parking lot cost $300,000 and furnishing about a further $25,000, said Hoffman.

The hospital serves the five Gulf Islands of Salt Spring, Galiano, Mayne, North and South Pender. Located at Ganges, most of the patients are from Salt Spring.

The original hospital was built in 1914 and the new one opened in 1958. Lady Minto was the wife of Canada's governor-general at the turn of the century.

Official opening by the premier is scheduled for 3 p.m. on May 19.

Students Gather For Drama

More than 500 young actors from as far away as Peace River will come here next week for the B.C. High School Drama Festival.

Plays will be presented at the McPherson Playhouse at 8 p.m. May 17, 18, 19, and 20 by students from 11 B.C. centres.

All plays have been of local festival winners except one. A special invitation went to Ucuelet High School where there was no festival.

The actors will live at the University of Victoria, and will take part in workshops covering every aspect of theatre, including acting, playwriting, makeup, costume design, and fencing.

The festival is non-competitive as far as plays are concerned, but there will be scholarships for outstanding individuals. Tom Kerr will adjudicate.

On Wednesday Victoria's Reynolds High will present Box and Cox, Coquitlam will offer Saldedra, and Ucuelet, The Bald Soprano.

Chilliwack will present on Thursday, I Still Don't Know What to Tell You; Powell River, Dr. Livingstone, I Presume; Surrey, The Objective Case, and Prince George, The Feast.

Friday there will be Kamloops' Interview, Creston's The Lesson, and Quesnel's A Resounding Tinkle.

Saturday, North Peace offers Doctor in Spite of Himself, Kamloops, Striptease, and Victoria High, The Ass and the Philosophers.

Glares and scowls illustrate anger over pensions.

Warm Day, Hot Protest By 150 Senior Citizens

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The sun was warm Wednesday afternoon but the old-age pensioners who had come from many parts of Vancouver Island weren't basking in it.

Intent on other purposes, the sun's rays went unnoticed as senior citizens burned with anger.

They stood outside the Legislative Buildings — about 150 strong but representing more than 16,000 members of the Old-Age Pensioners Organization in B.C.

Their wrath had spilled over with the announcement of federal Finance Minister Turner's budget in which pension increases of $2.88 a month were listed.

STOLEN

"All we're getting back is what they've been stealing from us for years. In Mr. (former prime minister Lester) Pearson's time I went to Ottawa and asked Mitchell Sharp, who was then minister of finance, for a true living cost bonus. I also asked that it be retroactive. The answer was no to both requests.

"Now they come and offer us 2 per cent when the cost of living's been up 4 and 5 per cent all the years from that time."

Wednesday's protesters said basic pensions should be $150 — not $82.80 — and accompanied by true cost-of-living bonuses.

They talked of plans to charter a 50-seat bus and go to Ottawa, adding that $9,000 had already been donated for this purpose by department stores, pensioners and others.

The organizers asked for calm but resentment grew as Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell explained the provincial government's position.

He said the idea of a guaranteed income for all citizens had been born in British Columbia.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett received an ovation when he suggested it had been "stillborn."

The old folk also protested when Barrett pointed out that provincial cabinet ministers could serve between 12 and 20 years, retire at 55 and enjoy a pension of $870 a month.

TAX BITE

One quiet-spoken woman persisted until she finally caught Campbell's ear. What, she asked, was the use of giving people over 65 a homeowner's bonus of $50 if it was taken away in taxes the next month. Her taxes, she said, had gone up $67.

Campbell replied that this was because municpal taxes had been raised.

"I've looked at prison menus, whth chilled juices, two poached eggs and the rest. They would cost $10 a day and the government is offering to pay us $5 to exist.

"I say we should go back and board with them (in prison) then we wouldn't have to pay school taxes and that sort of thing."

CAMPBELL PENSION SWITCH

By ROBERT OLVER
Times Staff

The B.C. government Wednesday went on record as favoring substantial increases in pensions to senior citizens in spite of the fact that in the last legislative session the Socreds moved a form of closure to stifle any debate on the issue.

The apparent deviation from party line came in a statement by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Wednesday to a demonstration by about 150 senior citizens outside the legislative buildings.

Campbell, who met earlier in the day with a three-member delegation fom the Old-Age Pensioners' Organization, told The Times later, "The B.C. government has been on record for more than five years as favoring a guaranteed income for senior citizens of $3,000 to $3,200 for married couples and $1,800 to $2,000 for single people."

These figures were somewhat better across the board than those the delegation said the OAPO had reqquested from the government.

"We asked for $150 a month instead of the basic current minimum of $82.88, and we had a very fruitful meeting," said Oliver Travera of Campbell River, spokesman for the group.

★ ★ ★

That means that a married couple would now get about $165.76 monthly or twice $82.88. According to Campbell, the government would like them to get up to $266 monthly for marrieds and about $166 monthly for singles.

This is $83.12 monthly more for singles and $100.24 better for married couples.

That is the deal Campbell says the B.C. government would like to see now, but here is what actually happened last Feb. 10 when opposition members tried to discuss the matter in the house:

Government action at that time revolved around an amendment to a Liberal motion deploring the Throne Speech for failing to provide adequate support for senior citizens.

New Democratic leader Dave Barrett moved the amendment to the effect that there should be a guaranteed minimum income of $200 monthly for senior citizens aged 65 or over who had been resident five years in the province.

Before the motion could be formally put to the legislature,

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said it should be ruled out-of-order because it called on the government to spend public money "without the recommendation of the Crown."

Under parliamentary rules, only the government can propose money bills.

Speaker William Murray then ruled that the motion was in order, but Peterson challenged the ruling and it was defeated by the government on a 33-16 vote.

The NDP motion also called for free medical drugs, free medicare coverage and $1 a day intermediate and chronic care for all pensioners in the province.

The government action in overruling the speaker was regarded at the time as a form of closure which had been invoked only three times in the past 11 years.

The debate on Feb. 10, although it mounted to fury, was never allowed to touch on the issue of increased pensions.

But Wednesday the government, as represented by Campbell, told the senior citizens: "The B.C. government, for five years, has been committed — firmly — to the idea of a guaranteed annual income for pensioners."

Young Denies Using Old Land Use Report

City council's planning committee chairman Ald. Mike Young, said today there is no need to rescind the James Bay Transportation and Land Use report of 1967.

He added it is not being used "as a planning tool" by city council.

Both the Beacon Hill Park Association and the James Bay Community Association have called for scrapping the report because they fear it would lead to deterioration of Beacon Hill Park and "destruction" of James Bay.

YOUNG

NOT APPLIED

Young said the report should not be given the dignity or indignity of being rescinded.

"It is there," he said, "it is not being applied. We are not using it as a basic guideline for policy planning."

Young said he shared the PHPA's concern that Douglas Street might be widened.

"I would agree, it does not appear to be necessary," he said.

Young said the real problem is the dispersal of traffic from James Bay, made crucial by the number of provincial government offices in the area.

"We have to face reality, we may have to have an extension on Michigan but it's too early to say for sure."

COVERED ROAD

He added that whatever was decided, care would be taken that the park was not damaged.

A covered road, he thought, might be an alternative.

Ruling out, for reasons of cost, the feasibility of a tunnel through the park, Young said:

"There is somewhat of a natural cut there with high ridges on both sides. It's really a speculation but it might be possible to go through there and cover over the driveway."

Young agreed that future traffic problems could be eased if the provincial government adopted a policy of dispersing office space around the periphery of the downtown city, and utilizing many of the second and third floors of city buildings that are now unused.

WALKOUTS SPREAD TO UPPER ISLAND

One-day walkouts in protest over lack of collective bargaining rights in the provincial civil service spread up-Island today.

The walkouts do not have union authorization.

While between 160 and 170 highways department maintenance employees based at Langford returned to work this morning, 128 stayed away from work in Port Alberni and Courtenay-Campbell River.

Twenty-six were off work at Port Alberni, 70 in Courtenay, 15 in Campbell River and 17 in Port McNeill and Comox-Courtenay.

The employees are members of the B.C. Government Employees Union, which has campaigned unsuccessfully for years for bargaining rights for provincial employees.

'Three Fingers Point' At Curtis—Gaglardi

By AB KENT

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis "has three fingers pointing at him" and should watch out before pointing the finger at anyone else, Welfare Minister Gaglardi said today.

The cabinet minister was replying to charges by the Saanich mayor about high welfare costs.

Curtis "should look to the needs in his own municipality first," Gaglardi said. He added that the mayor "has been making a lot of noises and doing a lot of talking"—but much of what he said made no sense.

The issue of welfare costs "has been batted around for 50 years and there is no easy, fast solution," Gaglardi said.

The mayor of Saanich, along with the mayors of some 70 other B.C. communities, wrote Gaglardi last month protesting welfare costs.

Curtis said the municipal share of social assistance should be reduced from 15 per cent to 10 per cent and questioned whether welfare was a suitable charge on real property taxation in the first place.

He did not deny that provincially the welfare bill had been brought down, but he still argued the municipal share is too large.

Gaglardi pointed out that last year the province had been able to return to the municipalities $3.5 million after the municipalities reduced their welfare rolls by 13 per cent.

He acknowledged receipt of "quite a few letters" and said review of welfare policy had been in progress for some time. Nothing had been firmed as a result so far, he said, but he replied to Mayor Curtis that he would examine the request "and do my best."

"There are certain responsibilities incumbent upon municipalities and some on the senior governments," Gaglardi said.

Last year, when he became minister (of rehabilitation and social improvement) the municipal share of welfare costs was cut from 20 per cent to 15 per cent, Gaglardi said.

But in 1967, as Curtis pointed out, the local share was only 10 per cent.

"I made the municipalities masters in their own house and gave them authority to stop payment on any (welfare) case," the minister said.

FRASER

★

BETTER SPLIT ON WAY?

A Socred backbencher today predicted that within 30 days the government will lessen the share of welfare costs that must be paid by municipalities in B.C.

Alex Fraser (Cariboo) made the statement after watching a letter campaign started by him finally have some effect on Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi.

Gaglardi admitted today he is looking "forcibly" at the possibility of "improving" the municipalities' share of welfare costs, which now stands at a theoretical 15 per cent. The senior governments share the other 85 per cent.

Fraser says that because of the formula, some municipalities are paying as much as 19 per cent and others are paying 12 per cent.

LISTENING

Fraser wants it reduced to 10 per cent but said he doesn't expect to get all he wants.

Gaglardi said Fraser is saying "something that could possibly be" but he would not comment on the prediction that an announcement will come in 30 days.

"You could say it's a possiblity," Gaglardi said. "We're looking at it very forcibly and actively."

Wade Stays With Board

Architect John Wade said today he has no intention of resigning from the city's Advisory Planning Commission.

His resignation was requested by Mayor Peter Pollen earlier this week.

Pollen blamed some of the city's planning ills on Wade, saying he had given "professional and biased counsel."

Wade said today, "I have no intention of resigning at this moment."

Wanted: A Buck for a Friend in Need

IT'S A LONELY WORLD for many, and if a friend to the distressed dies of starvation, it will be lonelier still. NEED, Victoria's year-old crisis line, faces a crisis of its own. The outfit is broke. And while its people hope for a renewal of the grants that have supported its volunteer-manned, round-the-clock telephone service, only a swift transfusion of dollars will guarantee survival.

I rarely ask you to tap pocket or purse in aid of even the most useful community service. I wouldn't be doing so now, if it weren't for a solid conviction that NEED shouldn't be allowed to go under.

The best way to make my point would be to follow a crisis line team through an actual shift. I suggested this notion to co-ordinator David Stewart, who promptly vetoed it. The thing about NEED, he explained, is that all calls — about 7,000 as of today — are received in confidence, and the anonymity of the caller strictly protected.

The two or three who handle each shift on the phones are good listeners. They don't sit in moral judgment, but they do encourage the caller to face his situation realistically.

The range of calls is infinite. In the same shift, a volunteer may be asked for the correct spelling of a word, or find himself lending an ear to a caller whose talk of suicide falls on the well-tuned ear as a cry for help.

NEED listens and discusses. Sometimes the chance to talk out a worry or a heartache is all that's required. Again, the volunteer may outline the workings of a community agency that specializes in help of the sort indicated.

A phone jingles. One of the volunteers on shift answers. To you or me, the loud music and background voices might indicate that some kidder at a party is having a little misguided fun.

Perhaps so. But the volunteer has learned from experience that the person at the other end may be making a roundabout approach to a problem that he can't handle alone.

The next call may be from somebody old and lonely. Or a child may have come home from school to a depressingly empty house — parents at work, vague fears, and a silence that demands breaking.

So she phones NEED. She and the volunteer chat about this and that, and finally the kid goes away reassured by the knowledge that a friendly voice is never more than a dialing distant.

Though the service hears from young and old, at least half those who get in touch occupy the middle years. The next call might be from the wife in a couple who find themselves with children grown and gone, and a frightening gulf between them.

Referral to a counselling agency may be indicated. Often enough, though a good talk — which the husband may wind up sharing — convinces the despairful that all is not necessarily lost.

Perhaps in a couple of days, or a week or a month, the same anonymous voice will be heard from again.

"Things are going better," the message may run. Or, "I don't feel so wretched any more."

Some calls are passed on by telephone operators who have come to recognize the trouble-shooting potential of the service.

NEED is now lending an ear to more than 600 callers a month. Tonight, a young baby-sitter frightened at the weight of her responsibility may dial. Some emergency that demands fast referral may be reported. An indignant neighbor who feels that someone should do something about a case of child abuse may set the apparatus of rescue in motion.

And now, NEED itself, a non-profit society with three paid staffers and enough volunteers to man its phones every hour of the year, stands in need of rescue.

If you can help with a buck or two, send your contribution direct to NEED — The Crisis Line, P.O. Box 311.

This service has demonstrated its value. I don't think we should let it fail for lack of a helping hand.

. . . And Still They Wait

The district's executive committee met Wednesday and tabled its own recommendation of some time ago that the seven senior staff outside the Canadian Union of Public Employees get the same 7.5 per cent raise this year as last.

The recommendation has been tabled or referred half a dozen times.

Committee chairman Hugh Curtis said this morning the committee was "rather pressed for time" and so the matter was tabled. He said it was not a question of "leaving them (staff) on the hook."

But another committee member, Earl Pallister of Langford, said he is disappointed.

"I don't think it is correct that everyone else got a wage increase and we leave these people on the hook."

He said the next meeting of the executive committee will be sometime within the next month.

A Kindly Professional Offers a Helping Hand

The passing years may have shortened the drives of Al Zimmerman, 63, but they certainly haven't lessened his love for the game, or the youngsters in it.

Zimmerman is a retired golf professional and tour winner who this year blessed the Times Vancouver Island Open with his presence. Besides, he now is in Sunday's 36-hole match-play final against Vaughan Trapp at Colwood. More important, however, is that he is about to pass that blessing along to three of the city's younger golfers. He will endeavour to impart to them some of his vast knowledge.

Zimmerman didn't have to do it, but he has arranged a friendly game with Gordie Rands, Brian Gandy, and Greg Barnes, three youngsters who one day soon may help to answer the question that has been bugging tee addicts lately:

"Where were all the shining city amateurs in the Times Open?

Not too prominent is a fair appraisal.

Rands, actually, was the last to fail, losing to Zimmerman in the semifinals, and as Rands is one in whom Zimmerman obviously sees some hope for the future so, undoubtedly, are the others, Gandy and Barnes.

"Maybe, I can help them," is what Zimmerman said simply of his offer to play a round with them.

He has spotted something there that just might be developed, so why not give them the chance to see what they can do with a little extra knowledge?

Skills Must Be Managed Properly

If that is Zimmerman's thinking, the youngsters should welcome the chance to listen and learn.

Because part of Zimmerman's philosophy is that no matter how far a golfer can hit the ball off the tee, and how well a player may putt, if he doesn't manage his approach to the game properly, it can be to no avail.

Mismanagement is a serious problem, he explained. Because what good is a super drive and the glamor of telling someone "I used a full wedge in," if you miss the green, and lose the hole.

That was the gist of Zimmerman's thought, and also, often these young fellows have been playing the holes — not badly, but wrongly. That is their sin.

As a for instance, he explained: "If the cup is tucked into the left-hand corner of the green, you just don't play to miss on the left side. That puts a player in trouble. If he must miss, he should miss on the right; then he would still have a chance."

Zimmerman wasn't giving away any trade secrets. He readily admitted that most of his opponents in the tournament here had been outdriving him, and out-putting him, but he is still in, and they are not. That is the difference. And he suggested that perhaps it may be that they just haven't been told how to manage their games to fit their abilities.

This is a big plus for a golfer and, if not a sure-fire recipe for success, at least it is a lesson that should be savored. And for Gordie, Brian and Greg it is a rare honor that they have been singled out as golfers with a possible future.

Room at Top for the Very Good

Amateur golf hasn't exactly prospered in a truly productive manner during the past few years, although two of the city's best elected not to play in the Island Open. Dave Mick, who led all of Canada in last year's Willingdon Cup play, and Carl Schwantje, a former B.C. Amateur champion, both stayed in school this spring. This practically left the field wide open to a brand new group as the Laurie Kerrs, the Bill McColls, the Eric Hibbersons and the Bob Hunts are past their prime.

After all, who was the last amateur to win this event? Bill Wakeham, that's who, and that was back before he became a pro in 1963. Honest. Before that, it was Wakeham, again, in '59.

Perhaps Zimmerman didn't know this, but that doesn't matter, and shouldn't. What does is that here is a man with a vast storehouse of know-how, who has taken an interest in three promising city golfers, whom he probably got to meet for the first time in these championships.

So why not make way for the new, and the young, and hopefully, the very good. Because all that Zimmerman has in mind really is that if these fellows, and possibly others like them, sincerely want to do better, he is only too pleased to help.

If this immediately put Zimmerman under the heading "nice people," and almost automatically assured him of being the sentimental choice for Sunday's final, he was quick to return the favor.

"It's been a nice tournament," he said. "I've enjoyed it."

Casual Reservations A Thing of the Past

Reservations for the use of Centennial Stadium will have to be accompanied by a prepayment of $25 starting July 1.

Floyd Fairclough, secretary-manager of the stadium committee, said Wednesday that too many sports groups have been booking the facility and then not using it.

Reservations have been accepted and confirmed without deposit since the stadium opened in 1967.

Fairclough said the system worked well for the first three years but it "became obvious about two years ago that some groups were making two or three reservations, many months in advance of a planned event, and then cancelling on short notice."

The offending groups were not identified.

The new ruling has no effect on the free use of the stadium for sports groups, schools or individuals wanting to use the facility for training purposes.

It is aimed at groups requiring exclusive use of the building and grounds — whether they charge an admission or not.

Fairclough also expressed the hope that this policy would promote "more respect" for the stadium in terms of leaving it tidier than some groups have in the past.

Momentum, Home Ice Belong to New York

NEW YORK (CP) — The team with the greatest momentum could have the key to winning a Stanley Cup, but Boston coach Tom Johnson is no firm believer in the theory.

New York Rangers have the momentum — a 3-2 win over the Bruins Tuesday night at Boston —and the home-ice advantage here tonight for the sixth game in the best-of-seven series for the National Hockey League title.

"It didn't help us," Johnson said Wednesday shortly after his club arrived in the city. "We won here Sunday (3-2) then let down last night."

The Bruin coach suggested it was not so much New York's ability as his own club's inept performance that enabled the Rangers, who now trail 3-2 in games, to knock off the heavily-favored Bruins in game No. 5.

"As far as I am concerned the Rangers lulled us to sleep," said Johnson, adding: "We didn't play our usual aggressive game."

TONIGHT THE NIGHT?

The Bruins aren't suffering from any of the minor ailments they normally acquire when they're playing the aggressive hitting game that has carried them to two straight East Division titles.

"We really didn't make much contact out there to absorb any punishment," Johnson replied to reporters' questions about the health of his team.

Ranger's Emile Francis, meanwhile, held court for reports in his Garden's office with the tidings from the wee hours of the morning still evident on his face.

The New Yorkers were met by nearly 1,000 fans when they arrived back at LaGuardia airport about 1 a.m. and the buffeting and glad-handing of players and management alike left a warm glow.

Francis declined to say which of his two goaltenders will start tonight's game — Gilles Villemure, who has looked sharp in his two appearances against the Bruins, or Eddie Giacomin who has been erratic in three games.

Johnson, meanwhile, announced that he's going back to Gerry Cheevers in an effort to wrap the series up by game No. 6. In the event a deciding seventh game is necessary it will be back in Boston Sunday starting at 11 a.m., PDT.

Cheevers has been anything but steady in two playoff games against New York, allowing five goals in each but got enough support in the series' opener to win 6-5.

The Bruins are hoping that with Lord Stanley's silver mug on the line, Cheevers will revert to the trap-door performances of two years ago when he ran a record playoff string of 10 straight wins into the first NHL championship for Boston in three decades.

Universities Alter Athletic Makeup

The Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association was formally dissolved Wednesday with the formation of the Canada West University Athletic Association.

The announcement was made in Calgary during week-long meetings of western university representatives.

A second conference, expected to be called the Great Plains Athletic Association, will be formed later this week to split the old WCIAA into eastern and western organizations.

Both associations will be independent.

The Great Plains group is to include Saskatchewan's Regina campus, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Brandon and the Lakehead.

Also in attendance were officials from Simon Fraser University, who indicated an interest in participating in the Canada West Association.

The association said it has invited Simon Fraser to submit formal application for entry next fall.

"We would welcome Simon Fraser into the league if it meets scholarship and recruitment restrictions," said CWUAA spokesman Dennis Kadatz, athletic director for the University of Calgary.

Royals Advance To Final

Gill McIlraith scored three goals Wednesday to spark Cosmopolitan Royals to a 5-2 victory over Victoria West II in a Jackson Cup soccer semi-final game at Victoria High School.

The Royals' playing-coach fired two of his goals in the second half to wipe out a Vic West lead, and help his team into the final against Vic West I Sunday at 2 p.m. at Vic High.

By JACK KEATING
Times Staff

Sure you can whiz through Victoria's line-up and say everyone did his part. But in all fairness you would have to pause twice.

Both times beside the name Thompson.

First, you'll notice Ivan scored four goals and collected a pair of assists; then that brother Brian set up three tallies and scored two himself.

Secondly, for those who saw them at work in Wednesday night's Western Lacrosse Association game at Memorial Arena, another pause to applaud a couple of the plays would be justified.

The 11-point output of the Thompson brothers and an inspired effort from the entire team earned the Victoria Shamrocks a surprising 13-11 victory over the powerful New Westminster Salmonbellies before 1,652 happy fans.

TIED FOR LEAD

Victory leaves the Rocks tied for first place with Vancouver Burrards who defeated Coquitlam Adanacs 10-8 in Wednesday night's other game.

Salmonbellies, defending WLA champions, who aren't in shape, get a chance to redeem themselves tonight playing a return engagement on the mainland against the Shamrocks.

But the fishmen are up to their neck in talent and even a not-fit crew may have squeaked by the Irish if the Thompsons hadn't delivered the goals.

NEW LINE SPARKLES

The prolific pair from Huntsville, Ontario, showed the Salmonbellies early that the Rocks meant business, combining for the first goal before the game was 90 seconds old.

Brian fired on long bouncer that hit the top corner above goalie Joe Comeau at 13:35 of the third period, giving the Rocks a 12-10 lead and what proved to be the winning goal.

"I noticed he was going down all night on long shots," explained Brian later "so I bounced it for the top corner."

The goal snuffed out a New Westminster rally which had seen them pull to within one goal, 11-10, after being down 10-7 early in the third period.

RALLY COMES CLOSE

Victoria was down 5-4 in the second period but scored four times within three minutes to hold a 9-7 edge after 40 minutes.

Levasseur fed Ivan the ball and the lanky forward popped in the clincher with just under a minute to play.

But Brian's first goal in the second period was by far the prettiest goal of the night and had the fans buzzing. He took a goalmouth pass and in one over-the-shoulder motion flung the ball into the net.

"You don't stop and think about it," he recalled after the game. "It's (ball) there and you do it, if you wait a split second you throw it off, it's all on impulse."

KOWALYK PLEASED

"Oh beautiful," said Kowalyk on the goal but his prime concern was "the team effort" and that "All three lines moved the ball around which makes the goals come easy."

Dennis Somner had two goals and Dave Thomson, Lonnie Restell, Ken Alexander, Ranjit Dillon and Jack Kastelein, who scored his first marker as a Shamrock, scored one goal each for the Rocks.

Dillon, who collected four assists, and Kastelein who made a neat rush to set up a goal had strong games on defence.

MAYS RETURNS TO NEW YORK

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Mays came back to New York today, joining the New York Mets in a National Baseball League trade that sent young minor league pitcher Charlie Williams and an undisclosed amount of cash to San Francisco Giants.

The announcement that Mays was returning to the city where he began as a New York Giant in 1951, before the Giants headed west in 1958, was made by Mets general manager Bob Scheffing.

Asked if he expected to play regularly, Mays said: "I don't know—that's up to the manager."

Yogi Berra, manager of the Mets, said Mays would join the team Sunday.

Was he pleased to have Mays? "You bet I am. He can help me in two positions—first base and the outfield," Berra said.

Big Rookie Sparks Burrard Victory

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rookie forward Doug Hayes scored four goals, including the winner, as Vancouver Burrards defeated Coquitlam Adanacs, 10-8, Wednesday night in Western Lacrosse Association action.

Hayes, six-foot-two inches and 230 pounds, clicked for three of his goals on power plays, using his size to advantage. Three of his goals came from the edge of the crease.

Rookie goalkeeper Dave Evans has also played a big part in the win, making 26 stops.

United Strategy Lies With Attack

Top Star Trophy and $325 in prize money will be awarded Saturday afternoon as the Pacific Coast Soccer League playoff championship is decided at Royal Athletic Park.

Victoria West-United and Vancouver Paul's Canadians will battle for the crown in a match beginning at 2 p.m.

It will be the second leg of a two-game, total-goal series and United will be nursing a one-goal lead.

A second-half goal by Dan Lomas, combined with the shutout goaltending of veteran Barry Sadler gave, United a 1-0 victory over Paul's in the first game last Sunday in Vancouver.

If past performance is any indication, Saturday's windup should be close. Both teams split a pair of league games and United edged Paul's by one point in the run for first-place honors.

Juan de Fuca Sports outscored Victoria Molsons 10-6 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Heywood Avenue Park Wednesday night.

Now It's Regals in Premier League

Victoria's entry in the six-team semi-professional loop, the Regals, open their campaign Saturday night against Eintracht at 7:15 at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Regals' playing coach Brian Hughes has eight players including himself from the Royals' roster he coached to the now-defunct Western Canada League crown last summer.

Douglas, 20, a prolific scorer and sportsman of the year in Trinidad, agreed to play with the Regals after Meeting Hughes several months ago.

Several players from the Coast League and outstanding players in the district and juvenile leagues round out the Victoria team.

"Once we get practising and playing together we'll be stronger than last year's (Royals) team," insists Hughes. "This will be a lot stronger league and we'll do all right," he added.

Hughes says his roster may be bolstered by some players currently with West-United who will be available following Saturday's Coast League final.

Barry Sadler is one whom Hughes is counting on, with Graham Lee, to provide goaltending this year. He may be flown over to Vancouver following the Coast League final to join the Regals.

Hughes is optimistic that Dave Gwyther, a Welsh international and third-division English player, will soon confirm that he will join the Regals for this season.

Claremont Sees Hope for Upset

As Gerry Montgomery explains it, Friday's 26th annual Greater Victoria senior high school track and field meet outcome at Centennial Stadium boils down to one question.

"Mt. Douglas has the outstanding stars and we have better depth and balance," suggested the Claremont coach. "The question is: which is more important?"

Montgomery won't get a final answer until about 3:30 p.m. Friday after the noise, color and excitement has subsided at Victoria's premier high school sports event.

MT. DOUG DEFENDING

Mt. Douglas, with several stars who also perform for Victoria track clubs, has captured meet honors for the last four years. Claremont has always had to settle for second or third place.

Montgomery feels the track program at Claremont might have advanced enough to topple Mt. Doug this year. He cites the school's victory over the highly-touted rivals at an exhibition meet a few weeks ago as an indicator.

"Yes, definitely, I think we have our best chance in recent years," insisted Montgomery before the three-day eliminations had been completed.

But once again Mt. Douglas, coached by Stan Gill, has to be considered the favorite. They're sending the highest number of finalists (69) and in the valuable "A" flight (43).

Oak Bay, which upset Mt. Doug in the Victoria relays last week, is second with 64 and 41 respectively. Claremont has 60 finalists including 34 in "A" flight.

Victoria High, Reynolds, Esquimalt, Belmont and Mount View are other schools entered.

Spring is Time of Danger For Fawns Along Roadways

Many items in the creel this week!

Recreationalists in the outdoors and highway travellers find young wild animals a common sight during May and June. Deer in particular are drawn to the rich luxurious growth along highways and secondary roads. Fawns have not yet learned the dangers of travelling vehicles and as a result create a serious hazard along busy roadways.

It is estimated that approximately 15,000 deer and killed annually in the U.S. along highways. This is equal to half of the total estimated population of deer on the whole of Vancouver Island.

Various corrective measures have been tried, including reflecting mirrors, fencing and underpasses, but the dangers still exist. Many devies have been tried on Island highways, but because of the habits of blacktail deer, all have proven ineffective. Unlike the whitetail and mule deer, which usually travel a well-used game trail, the blacktail has no set path he habitually follows.

Spring is by far the time of greatest kill of wildlife along highways and a time when motorists should use the greatest caution. Slow down when you see deer and be prepared to stop if there are deer on either side of the road. In this situation, for you and the deer, the danger is extreme.

Spring is also a time when many young animals are seen with no apparent sign of adults. For the sake of the young animal, don't consider it an orphan and kidnap it from its natural home. The mother is probably watching and while hiding from your view, she is ready to care for it the minute you leave.

Recent information from the U.S. shows a gradual but steady growth in the number of sports fishermen but a decrease in the number of hunters. In 1970 there were 14 million hunters, a decline of two per cent from the 1960 total. On the other hand, the number of sports fishermen jumped from 25 million to 33 million, an increase of over 30 per cent.

From the U.S. population, 23.4 per cent of those 12 years or older hunted or fished in 1970 — 36.6 per cent of the men and 11.5 per cent of the women.

Fishermen and hunter expenditures increased almost 70 per cent between 1965 and 1970 — from $4,046,440,000 to $6,826,571,000.

Information from the B.C. Wildlife Federation hunters and anglers have increased by 68 per cent in B.C. in the past 10 year. To quote the Federation, "A half million people, resident and tourist (and not including unlicenced juveniles), fish and hunt in B.C. today. The net economic benefit to the province has been calculated by economists at $100 million."

Yet, even with this enormous economic benefit to the province, the fish and wildlife branch budget remains woefully inadequate.

Cutler, Donnelly To Help Dolphins

Victoria Dolphins dive into the second season of operation in the B.C. Big Four Junior Football League with the opening of a two-week spring training camp Sunday at Copley Park in the Northridge area of Saanich.

Coach Frank Hindle, who terms this the Dolphins' "consolidation year," will again be assisted by Garry Andrews Roy Vollinger and Joe Kurylo.

Dave Cutler, Edmonton Eskimos place-kicking linebacker, and Brian Donnelly, a B.C. Lions' defensive back, also will take part in the training camp as guest coaches before leaving Victoria to begin their Canadian Football League campaigns.

Approximately 60 players are expected to turn out as a result of a recent team meeting.

Wanderers to Face Irish Internationals

Oak Bay Wanderers of the Victoria Rugby Union will tackle an arduous task on May 18 — trying to overcome the powerful Bohemian Club from Limerick.

Wanderers tackle the power-packed Irish XV at 6:30 p.m. in Centennial Stadium.

To make things even tougher for the Wanderers, two members of the Irish international squad will likely appear on the touring club's lineup.

Denis Hickey has six caps and currently plays No. 8 for Ireland while Paul Andreucetti recently was capped after a stint as a reserve on the international XV. Hickey tips the scales at 203 pounds and can play wing-forward as well as No. 8. Andreucetti, 196 pounds, is rated as a "very strong runner" and plays centre.

Among the other outstanding players expected to make the trip are Martin O'Sullivan, an Irish schoolboy international; Tony Hickey, and Irish industrialist who has toured with the Barbarians and Wolfhounds; Joe Burke, the leading club scorer and an Irish soccer international; and Fergus Walsh, the leading try-scorer and a champion tennis player.

Due to the visits of the Irish side and another touring team from Bridgend, Wales, this month, the VRU has decided to postpone the annual awards dinner and dance from Saturday until a date (yet to be set) in June.

Cardinals' Gibson Misses That Luck

By the Associated Press

To hear Sam McDowell and Clay Kirby talk, you'd think they were subscribers to the Lefty Gomez theory that "I'd rather be lucky than good."

"I would say I've been lucky so far this year, and I mean very lucky," said San Francisco's McDowell after running his record to 5-0 with a 7-3 Giants victory over Montreal Expos Wednesday night.

"I feel that when you give up three runs you're lucky to win," said San Diego's Kirby after a 5-3 Padres triumph over Philadelphia Phillies.

Not so fortunate was St. Louis' winless Bob Gibson, who carried a four-run lead into the eighth inning only to have Houston Astros explode for six runs to beat the Cardinals 10-7.

Elsewhere in the National League, New York Mets nipped Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 in 14 innings, Atlanta Braves battered Pittsburgh Pirates 8-4 and Chicago Cubs downed Cincinnati Reds 4-2.

McDowell, obtained from Cleveland during the winter, has won five of San Francisco's eight victories and is the only reason the last-place Giants are still in the league. And he calls it "a good, tough league" despite his fastest start ever.

Sudden Sam held the Expos as close as you can get—1-1 through seven innings — and the Giants erupted for six runs in the eighth.

Backed by home runs for Nate Colbert and Fred Kendall, Kirby survived five hits and eight walks to beat the Phillies. He was helped by three double plays.

Gibson, 0-4, was helped to a 7-3 lead by Ted Simmons' grand slam before the Astros teed off on the St. Louis ace and two relievers for their six-run eighth. Roger Metzger started it with his first major league homer and Jimmy Stewart capped it with a tie-breaking, two-run pinch triple.

Jim and Gaylord Perry, baseball's pitching brothers, did their thing in the American League, Gaylord tossing a five-hitter to carry Cleveland Indians to a 7-2 victory over Kansas City Royals that vaulted the Indians into first place for the first time in four years, then Jim hurling eight shutout innings en route to Minnesota Twins' 2-0 victory over New York Yankees.

In the other AL games, Baltimore Orioles squeezed by Texas Rangers 1-0, Chicago White Sox defeated Detroit Tigers 7-0, Milwaukee Brewers blanked Oakland Athletics 4-0 and California Angels topped Boston Red Sox 5-1.

Penalties Hurt Oil Kings

OTTAWA (CP) — Peterborough Petes established themselves as solid favorites to win the 1972 Memorial Cup Wednesday night with a convincing 6-4 win over Edmonton Oil Kings.

Coming on the heels of their 4-2 win over Quebec champion Cornwall Royals Monday, the victory put Petes into Sunday's sudden-death final for national junior hockey honors.

The Royals and the Oil Kings play Friday for the right to oppose the Ontario champions.

Both general-manager Bill Hunter and coach Brian Shaw of Edmonton were upset with the part played in their team's loss by two illegal-stick penalties.

In both cases the sticks were less than two inches thick at the blade, the minimum stipulated in Canadian Amateur Hockey Association rules.

The Petes cashed in on the first such call to score the winning goal early in the third period and Hunter called it "a cheap way to win a hockey game."

But on the ice the Petes displayed a big edge over the Western champions. Strongest evidence was that they allowed the Oil Kings only two shots on net in the final period and the first after more than 13 minutes of play.

In all Edmonton tested Peterborough goalie Mike Veisor 33 times while the Petes had 49 shots on John Davidson, picked up for the playoffs by the Kings from Calgary Centennials.

Doug Gibson, a smoothy at centre for the Petes, got two goals and two assists, adding to his first game total of two points. He now has a commanding lead over individual scorers in the tournament.

Brian Ogilvie's slapshot from outside the blueline provided the first Edmonton goal. Terry McDonald, Don Kozak and Darcy Rota also scored for the Oil Kings.

TICKET SALES PAY FOR DAYS

Sales of Treasure Hunt tickets will provide the main source of funds for this year's Victorian Days.

Treasure Hunt, an annual Victoria Days feature, involves selling tickets which allow holders to dig in Willows Beach sand for capsules containing anywhere from $5 to $100.

9,000 TICKETS

About 2,000 of the $1 tickets have been sold. With the aid of service clubs and other groups, organizers hope to sell 9,000 tickets.

Money raised through ticket sales is already committed to finance prizes for the logging sports contest planned for the Inner Harbor, May 22, a motorcycle rodeo, sky diving and street dances.

It will also finance the $3,000 top prize and $1,000 buried treasure awarded in the Treasure Hunt.

DANCING

There will be lots of dancing during the Victorian Days celebrations.

The Community Arts Council will hold its Victorian Days Arts Ball at Craigdarroch Hall, May 20.

Tickets for the ball and dinner can be obtained from the Community Arts Council, 1960 Lansdowne, for $15 a couple.

On Monday, May 22, at 9 p.m. the Big Band will provide a night of free dancing on the Causeway.

Square dancing will be the order of the evening on Thursday, May 25, at 7:30 p.m. The 700 block of Yates Street will be roped off to take the maximum number of eights possible.

ROCK BANDS

More dancing is planned on the Causeway Friday night with the Big Band playing in front of the Empress and two rock bands, Frendlin Page and the Sunnybrook Farm Band, performing in front of the Legislative Buildings.

Two dances are scheduled Saturday, May 27. The Naden Band will play for the Fort Victoria Costume Ball in the Bay Street Armory starting at 9 p.m. Tickets can be obtained from the Armory.

At 7 the same evening the St. Andrew's and Caledonia Society will hold a supper dance at Holyrood House.

Woodward Considering 6-Day Week

Woodward Stores is considering opening its Mayfair store six days a week — but no change is expected for at least two months.

At present the store is closed Mondays.

A company spokesman said the company would be watching the Vancouver experiment where Woodward Stores went on a six-day operation last week.

If the experiment is successful, particularly for suburban stores like the one in New Westminster, then the six-day week will be adopted here.

Swim Pool Plan Revived

A municipally-operated swimming pool may be a reality in Sidney next year if plans can be completed in time for a referendum.

The idea has been sparked by directors of Sanscha, Sidney's privately-run community centre, who have written council to request that a referendum be held to approve funds for a pool on Sanscha grounds.

CONTROL

The executive of Sanscha — the Sidney and North Saanich Community Hall Association — also wants to take immediate steps to re-direct control of Sanscha to the town of Sidney.

Under terms of a Royal Trust lease, the land and buildings are now deeded to North Saanich and Saanich residents in perpetuity and operated by a 12-member board.

Sanscha president Bob Day said at a meeting of Sidney recreation commission Wednesday that the Royal Trust lease can only be changed "if the people of North Saanich say it is okay."

Day noted that North Saanich municipality has always refused to share operating costs of Sanscha although the town of Sidney has made various contributions.

"I feel North Saanich is not interested," said Day.

Mayor Trevor Davis of North Saanich said later the municipality has no position in this matter.

"The decision is up to the individuals who contributed to the construction of Sanscha," said Davis.

Sidney recreation commission members questioned the effect a swimming pool proposal might have on the Saanich Peninsula Agricultural and Recreational Association $680,000 curling and skating drive for funds to build a complex.

LAUDED

"We are not arguing with SPARA, we want to work with them," said Day.

Mayor Stan Dear of Sidney also approved, and has arranged a meeting of Sidney council next Monday to discuss Sanscha proposals with the directors. The mayor has also invited SPARA representatives to attend.

In December, 1970, a referendum to build a swimming pool in Sidney as a centennial project failed to achieve the required 60 per cent majority by a narrow margin.

Funds raised at that time by the centennial committee in separate projects amounted to more than $4,000 and were placed in a municipal trust fund.

Twins Lead Services

Twin ministers Ralph and Louis Sutera, of Mansfield, O., will hold evangelical services in Central Baptist Church, 833 Pandora, beginning Monday May 15 at 7.30 p.m.

The evangelists, who are identical twins will be accompanied by song-leader and singer, 35-year-old Dr. Virgil Brock, and by Henry and Freda Teichrob from Saskatchewan.

Bid to Break Ice in Zoning Freeze

MILL BAY — The Cowichan Valley Regional Board's new zoning regulations face their first test with a request that a Cowichan Bay parcel be rezoned from rural residential to industrial.

Director Trevor Daniels said the request, if approved, would mean "a beautiful piece of country, enjoyed and admired by thousands every year, would be destroyed forever."

The board last week passed a bylaw freezing all property in Cowichan Bay to its current use.

NEAR MILL

The property in question is adjacent to Slegg Brothers mill and the owner wants to build a mill for making shakes and shingles. It's owned by John Hager and his application was made by a Duncan law firm.

Members of the board Wednesday evening referred the request to the policy administering committee.

Daniels told fellow board members and Mill Bay ratepayers present at Wednesday's meeting that his planning committee has had a "very frustrating" time with the provincial government in the past four months trying to get them to move on land use.

Daniels said the usual problem with the introduction of land use controls is resistance by some sector of the public but, since he became chairman of the planning committee four months ago, "our biggest obstacle has been the Department of Municipal Affairs."

Daniels said that the most astounding aspect of this situation is that Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell professes to encourage introduction of land use controls but "has failed in all the years it has been in existence to have ready and available models of the regulations needed for this purpose.

Because of the situation Daniels said the work of the planning committee and its affiliated advisory planning commissions has been virtually brought to a standstill.

He said he made his report public so that blame for any further delays in carrying out these functions falls not on the regional board nor on the planning committee or advisory planning commissions, "but on the Department of Municipal Affairs, where it squarely belongs."

Smokeless Burners Asked for Hog Fuel

MILL BAY—Cowichan Valley Regional Board will ask the provincial government to study establishment of smokeless burner systems for hog fuel.

Director B. E. Russell of North Oyster told the board Wednesday that particularly in the northern section of the regional district a serious pollution problem already exists from the indiscriminate dumping of hog fuel.

Because the district does not have the financial resources to deal with the problem, he said the board should urge the provincial government to establish smokeless burners to consume hog fuel and wood wastes.

Russell said the burners may not be the complete answer to what mills should do with wastes "but if we leave it go endlessly, it can only get worse."

Russell said he doesn't like the idea of companies buying up land to fill up with hog fuel and bury it.

"It gets rid of hog fuel but I have seen in some cases where it is then sold to developers who plan to build houses. I don't know how the houses will stand up."

Sept. 1 Set For School Merger Date

DUNCAN — Cowichan school board hopes to take in the southern portion of the Ladysmith School District before Sept. 1.

After meeting Wednesday with department of education officials, trustees unanimously passed a resolution supporting the merger. The rest of the Ladysmith district will join the Nanaimo School District.

Woman Holds Jaycee Purse-Strings

DUNCAN — A 21-year-old Duncan woman who was elected treasurer of Duncan Jaycees Wednesday evening is believed to be the first woman on the executive of a Jaycees group.

Janice Alcock is also the first single girl to be initiated into the Duncan Jaycees.

A decision by the local group in October to allow women into their branch on a one-year trial period had a shocking effect on the international organization and many members have still not recovered.

Eight of the 30 Duncan members are women.

Some, Not All, Benefit If Loving Goes to Pot

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you like sex, chances are you'll like marijuana, a United States government commission reports. But it cautions that the drug is no aphrodisiac, nor does it heighten sexual enjoyment for all users.

The National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse said it found evidence that marijuana appears to intensify pleasurable experiences and heighten the senses for many users, even though parts of these effects may be psychological.

"It is this fact which probably explains why substantial proportions of marijuana users characterize their sexual experiences under the influence of the drug as particularly intense, prolonged, sensuous and pleasurable," the commission said.

That report, which found no evidence that marijuana is harmful when smoked less than once a day, omitted any mention of the sex findings. One commssioner said they were left out because they're "dynamite" and would have drawn attention away from the main findings.

It said substantial numbers of persons report they are more interested in sex after smoking pot, and found evidence that marijuana relaxes inhibitions and reduces a person's normal restraints against sex, allowing users to respond more freely.

But even so, marijuana isn't the aphrodisiac that many of its fans claim it to be, the commission said.

While pot makes sex more enjoyable for a lot of men and women, the commission said, it also has no such effect on a lot of others, and may even decrease sexual desire in some.

"At best, available evidence is inconclusive," the commission said. It said research indicates generally that the more a person uses marijuana and the more he or she expects it to intensify sexual pleasure, the more likely it is to do so.

Research also showed that marijuana users are more sexually active than nonusers. For example, the commission said, one survey of more than 500 college undergraduates found that 72 per cent of marijuana users had engaged in pre-marital sex while only 34 per cent of nonusers had done so.

But the commission said it isn't clear whether pot leads to sex or sex leads to pot. The same survey found that, of those who reported having sex before age 16, only 7 per cent denied trying any illegal drug while 47 per cent of the virgins said they stayed clear of drugs as well as sex.

Montreal Movie Lauded

CANNES, France (CP) — Canada stepped into the limelight Wednesday at the Connes Film Festival with the presentation of Montrealer Gilles Carle's film La Vraie Nature de Bernadette.

Carle, 43, and his two stars, Micheline Lanctot and Donald Pilon, said after the showing they were happy with the good reception given their film in Cannes. They had left Canada before the film opened in Montreal and missed the reaction of Quebec audiences.

The film, which Carle describes as a "realistic fable of the difficulties of livng in Quebec, Canada and America in 1972," is one of three Canadian entries in the festival this year.

Scheduled for showing next week is A Fan's Notes by Eric Till of Toronto. The full-length film concerns a man who discovers he is destined in life to be an onlooker or fan, not a player or participant.

Zikkaron by Montrealer Laurent Coderre is an animated short depicting man at the centre of the mysteries of life and is a symbolic representation of what Coderre calls "the human adventure."

War Refugees Endless Stream

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

DA NANG (AP) — Vietnam's great river of sorrow is at flood again as hundreds of thousands of refugees stream out of their homes and villages, away from the war, away from the bombings and the artillery barrages.

★ ★ ★

By boat and army trucks, they come in an endless flow of misery, on foot, on motorbikes, on incredibly overloaded buses from places that are no more— Dong Ha, Quang Tri, Cam Lo.

Da Nang is the mouth of the great river; more than 300,000 homeless have poured into the lovely old French port at the bottom of the 3,000-foot-high Hai Van Pass, the Pass of the Clouds.

Some never get there at all. The carcasses of two army trucks and a bus that once ran from Dong Ha to Hue to Ha Dang lie in deep ravines among a rubble of shattered crates and suitcases, mute testimony to the treacherous curves on the winding, climbing road through the pass.

A few days ago a wooden and straw junk, loaded with 110 refugees, capsized and sank in a storm along the coast.

American civilians working with South Vietnamese welfare officials estimate 250,000 persons are trapped in the northern villages between the new front line above Hue and the demilitarized zone.

Camp Books, which the U.S. 1st Marine Division vacated two years ago, is a ghost town come back to life. Families from Dong Ha and Cam Lo, which the marines once secured and pacified, hang their washing and cook their noonday rice in the screened-in barracks.

★ ★ ★

The best organized refugee centre is Camp Land, a former U.S. prison stockade still ringed with watchtowers and 12-foothigh triple-mesh barbed wire.

Da Nang, its population almost doubled by the influx of refugees, has become a vast open central market, where food is plentiful and, for the moment, money, too.

On a temporary basis Da Nang and its huge bases left by the Americans can house another 100,000 refugees, but the city has nothing to offer in the way of work. The American troop withdrawal already has caused an economic recession, and there are no industries of any kind.

WAITING for evacuation, elderly refugee holds her sleeping grandchild and an uncertain future. She hopes to be carried by the navy from a port near Hue to somewhere in the south of Vietnam. (AP Wirephoto)

Driverless Cab Kept Going

CHICAGO — An unidentified taxi driver picked up three passengers at O'Hare airport Wednesday and promptly fell out of his cab as he was rounding the first curve.

Passengers Jack Sharin, Jim Ryan and Libby Truman, all of the New York area, said that they couldn't believe it when the driver's door flew open and he tumbled out.

Sharin wedged himself into the tiny window between the front and back seats in an attempt to halt the moving car. He ended up stuck in the window unable to reach the ignition key, so he started to steer the cab and put it in neutral. He finally came to stop by running the cab against an embankment next to the road.

Sharin jumped from the cab, after unwedging himself, and started to run back to see if the cab driver was all right, but a police car pulled up and deposited the slightly scraped driver, who drove them to their destination.

EVERETT, Wash. — Edward Nixon, younger brother of the president, has resigned as state Republican committeeman from Snohomish County to go to the nation's capital and work for President Nixon's re-election.

CHICO, Calif. — Chico State College students Joel Holmes and Dan Updegraff teeter-tottered for 215 consecutive hours to lay claim to the world's record.

They ate and slept on the teeter-totter, leaving it only for brief restroom breaks from April 26 until noon Friday. The previous record for marathon teeter-tottering was 200 hours, they said.

LONDON — A husband is entitled to put his feet up and relax even if his wife demands he take her out socializing, the president of Britain's high court family divison has ruled.

Judge Sir George Baker rejected a divorce suit by the wife of Felixtowe dockworker Giovanni Di Mascio, 49, whose lawyer said all he wanted to do when he got home was "have his meal, get his feet up and watch television."

REDDING, Calif. — A Redding police detective warned local residents in a television appearance to "lockup" their homes to guard against a rash of recent burglaries.

Lt. Bobby Coulter then returned home and found that $300 worth of fishing equipment had been stolen from his unlocked garage.

WASHINGTON — "The first thing he did," Mrs. Cabor Coville said of the congressman whose car tore down her brick wall, "was to get out of the car and begin shaking everyone's hand."

The politician, 16-term Mississippi Democratic Rep. Jamie Whitten, didn't recall events quite that way, but he said that if he did that, "I was just showing how thankful I was that no one was hurt" when his 1969 Oldsmobile crashed through a brick wall in Georgetown after his car struck another at an intersection.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Princess Eutacia, the fire-eater with the Bartok European Circus, received first and second-degree burns when a fire broke out in her house trailer while she was practising her act, fire officials reported.

Her husband, Count Desmond, the circus sword swallower, lost his cutlery in the blaze but in true show business fashion carried on and "ate" a bent coat hanger at that night's performance.

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. — Three Arab pickle and pepper packers have gone kosher.

It all started when the Safie Brothers Farm Pickle Co. near Mount Clemens decided to turn out a line of kosher pickles and peppers named King David. The three brothers — George, Charles and Louis — needed a rabbi to make it kosher. Rabbi Jack Goldman said he would be happy to oblige, and Wednesday the three Arab brothers and the rabbi celebrated the birthday of a new pickle.

GODFATHER'S FOLKS EYE CONVERSATION

NEW YORK (NYT) — We were having a conversation about "Conversation" the other day with Francis Ford Coppola. "Conversation" is the title of an original thriller, and Coppola is its author.

He is also the co-author and director of a little number called The Godfather, as well, as the adapter of F. Scott Fitzgerald's The Great Gatsby, which Jack Clayton will soon direct for Paramount release. Paramount, by the way, will also distribute "Conversation" and they don't mind in the least conversing about the fact that they are the folks behind The Godfather, either.

Coppola will handle the directorial chores on Conversation,' and among the actors he will be handling is Gene Hackman, this year's Oscar winner for The French Connection. "Hackman will play a professional eavesdropper who is himself a totally private person," says Coppola.

"Eventually, he gets so caught up in his work that he seems to be heading straight for disaster. I think the movie will say something significant about the nightmarish situation that has developed in our society, a system that employs all the sophisticated electronic tools that are available to intrude upon our private lives."

Coppola's public life will include some non-movie projects in the near future. Next October, he'll direct Regina Resnik in the American premiere of Gottfried von Einem's The Visit at the San Francisco Opera.

I guess happiness was just a thing called Joe, so far as Peter Boyle, Norman Wexler and John G. Avildsen are concerned. That's why Boyle, who won raves a couple of years ago for his performance as a soft-headed hardhat in that controversial movie, and screenwriter Wexler and director Avildsen are getting together on a new film. Wexler is now finishing the screenplay for The Burglar, and if all goes well shooting should begin next fall in Westchester County.

"The Burglar will not be cops and robbers stuff," Avildsen relayed from Hollywood, where he's completing the Jack Lemmon comedy, Save the Tiger. "It will be both a melodrama and a character study that will show why as well as how he burglarizes." Well, if the guy is really good, we'll settle for the how.

Jean-Claude Carriere, the Frenchman whose play, The Little Black Book, opened and closed rather abruptly on Broadway, isn't going to let himself sink into a sulk.

He's back in action already, planning a movie with veteran director Luis Bunuel, with whom he has worked on such films as Belle de Jour and Diary of a Chambermaid. The new film, called Bourgeoisie, will get under way May 15 in Paris.

Carriere describes his screen play as "a serious farce about six friends who set out to have dinner together but — because of many odd occurrences — never do. The characters include an ambassador from a South American country, a police inspector, a couple of drug dealers and odd bishops."

Oscar Body Considers Reforms

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (NYT) — The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, often accused of being a conservative group run by Hollywood's geriatric set, is considering new ways of injecting fresh policy-making blood into the organization, of weeding out voting members who haven't had a film credit in years and of selecting foreign films for awards.

Studio chiefs, actors, writers and directors, representing a new generation of filmmakers, and many members of the academy board itself, agree that a slight shakeup without sentiment would gain more respect for that glistening eight-and-a-half-pound statuette named Oscar.

A few years ago the academy examined its voting lists, and, with a blush the best makeup artist couldn't hide, dropped several names, including Alfred Bloomingdale, the president of Diners Club. Since the academy is supposed to be "an honorary organization of industry craftsmen," his presence was a puzzlement.

"I think he was going to produce a film, recalled an academy official embarrassed by the memory.

The embarrassment was understandable as the academy turns down more applicants for membership than it accepts. Membership is based on film credits (usually two or three, depending on the artistic branch); the recommendation of two sponsors; or an award nomination.

Some of the branches, such as art direction, require five years experience and two film credits.

But the inclusion of a credit-card executive proves that, despite fancy talk, exceptions are made. This explains why some anti-establishment actors, like George C. Scott, who won an Oscar last year, ignore the academy.

Today, the strongest criticism levelled against the academy is one of age. A top official guessed that the average age of the voting membership was 50, and of the executive board around 60.

"In a world of creative people," he said, "that's a disaster." With few films produced anymore, it can take a young director or writer several years to acquire credits — unless an exception is made. Consequently, the voting membership remains middle-aged.

"It's important that we re-evaluate qualification for membership, that we vitalize it," said John Green, a vice-president. "We want to bring in younger people, but it's now simply a question of size or youth. It's still a question of quality."

The academy has 2,970 voting members. One producer who'd like to see changes made wishes that number were doubled to "vitiate the strength of people who shouldn't be voting."

He was referring, he said, to members who spend half the year in the mineral baths at Palm Springs or playing poker on a Mediterranean yacht. When can they see the movies?

"I looked at our active membership list," he went on, thumbing through the official book, "and I ask myself, 'Who are these people?' Some I've never heard of. Others I thought were dead."

A larger vote, he feels, would cut through jealousies and personal vendettas. (When Audrey Hepburn failed to receive a nomination for "My Fair Lady," many felt it was a protest against Jack Warner for giving her the role).

Bloc-voting by studio, he added, can no longer win Oscars, but bloc-voting, particularly in editing, sound and art, can still win nominations because one or two studios still maintain large technical departments.

It is not likely that the academy will admit a rash of new members (who pay yearly dues of $48), but it probably will scrutinize its voting list again, which includes, in the acting branch, such forgotten names as Mary Livingstone Benny, who hasn't made a film since 1937. Some might find themselves shifted to non-voting status, as associate members.

"And we really must get younger people on policy committees," said Howard Koch, treasurer. "If they can't vote yet, perhaps we can make them probationary members. Otherwise it's years before they take an active part."

Claim Urged Of Dixon Entrance

QUEBEC (CP) — The Fisheries Council of Canada asked the federal government Wednesday to formally declare Dixon Entrance Canadian internal waters.

The narrow entrance to Hecate Strait separates British Columbia's Queen Charlotte Islands from the southern tip of the Alaska panhandle.

Disputes over rights in the area led to arrests of several Canadian fishing boats last year for operating within three miles of the Alaskan coast.

The council, in a resolution passed at its annual convention which ended Wednesday, noted recent baselines proclaimed by Canada asserted Canadian fishing and pollution-control authority over the disputed water.

Insolvent Stay Home

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — City council here will ask the federal government to discourage travelling youngsters this summer, unless they are over 16 and have enough money to support themselves.

The council endorsed a letter from the city of Penticton asking for support of a resolution aimed at making travel more difficult for the young and insolvent.

Grants Given B.C. Schools

VANCOUVER (CP) — Half of the Weyerhaeuser Foundation's $6,000 in grants to Canadian universities have been awarded to B.C. schools. the University of B.C. and Cariboo College in Kamloops each received $1,000, while the University of Victoria and Simon Fraser University were given $500 grants.

MLA Loses His Boots —But Not His Humor

EDMONTON (CP) — The Wednesday sitting of the Alberta legislature opened on a humorous note when Gordon Stromberg rose on a point of privilege.

"I have been held up to ridicule, contempt and mockery in the Edmonton Journal of today," Stromberg said.

The Journal, in a story describing how Stromberg's boots had been ferreted away by other members of the legislature during Tuesday night's sitting, had identified him as the Social Credit MLA for Camrose.

"I may have lost my shoes, but I still retain my seat as the Progressive Conservative member for the Camrose constituency," he said.

The temptation to crack a pun was more than Speaker Gerry Amerongen could resist.

"I have the utmost sympathy," Amerongen said, "and the honorable member is no doubt well aware that losing the shoes is often preliminary to facing defeat." (Defeet.)

Wafflers Reply

REGINA (CP) — The Waffle element of the Saskatchewan New Democratic Party is asking party members for support in a protest against proposals to disband the Waffle faction in the Ontario party, it was announced Wednesday.

John Richards, MLA for Saskatoon University, said in a prepared statement the move by the Ontario NDP is being made because it is afraid of the Waffle element there. He described it as "an attempt by the Lewis dynasty and its CLC backers to rid themselves of an increasingly powerful challenge to their grip on the party and its direction."

Kindergartens Set

EDMONTON (CP) — The city public school board Tuesday approved establishment of kindergartens in two public schools both of which have empty classrooms available.

The board approved requests from parents in three districts that kindergartens be operated in the schools, provided funds are available. Supplies and facilities would be provided for the parent-sponsored programs. The board favored a program in which parents would pay $10 to $15 a month which would go toward hiring a teacher.

Refinery Blast

KAMSACK, Sask. (CP) — One man was in critical condition in hospital following an explosion and fire early Wednesday at a petroleum refinery near this east-central community.

A spokesman for Northern Petroleum Co. said the explosion is believed to have come from the main petroleum pumphouse, destroyed in the one-hour blaze at about 4 a.m.

★ ★ ★

Budget Change

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta government has decided to put the University of Calgary on a three-year operating budget, advanced education minister Jim Foster said Tuesday.

The university now operates on a one-year budget.

Foster made the statement in reply to a 53-page university budget committee report in which disaster was predicted for 1973-74 if projected no-growth enrolments prove accurate and if there is no change in government per-student support.

Province Bows Out

Regina (CP) — Nine schools in Northern Saskatchewan, now operated by the province for the federal government, are to be returned to federal jurisdiction, education minister Gordon MacMurchy said Wednesday.

The province began operating the schools under contract in 1968 and it will be terminated a year early, on Sept. 1, at the request of Indian representatives.

COOL WEATHER DELAYS SPRING CULTIVATION

REGINA (CP) — Cool weather together with rain and snow showers have delayed spring cultivation in eastern and northern Saskatchewan, the Saskatchewan Crop Insurance Board reported today.

The central, southwest and western areas had local rain and snow in varying amounts but spring work was generally under way or planned for this week, the board said in its first report of the season.

In the extreme southwestern area, seeding was generally in progress and in several rural municipalities 50 to 75 per cent of the crop now was seeded.

In general, the central part of the province has sufficient moisture to germinate a crop. Rain, however, will be needed to promote growth.

Calving is about 80 per cent completed throughout the province.

Some areas in the southwest report that cattle are in poor condition after a long winter and short grass this spring.

Problems of Runaway Children

In the U.S. News and World Report, I read that each week more than 100,000 of our children run away from home, schools and institutions. A conservative estimate is that about 600,000 minors ran away in 1970. Also, adolescents continue to leave schools at a rate exceeding half a million a year. That should make us worry.

More girls than boys are running away, and more runaways are ending up in small cities near their home, rather than in far-away "glamour cities." Some go to the "runaway houses," which have now been set up in many big cities. In Chicago, the average age of a runaway is 14 years, although some are 10 or 11.

In Boston, homeless youngsters sleep all night in automat restaurants, and in San Diego, where it is warmer, they sleep on the beach. Some, unfortunately, come to harm. Some of the girls become prostitutes, and other youngsters become drug peddlers, thieves and beggars. In Washington, D.C., there are several dozen havens — public and private — built to look after the 10,000 or so runaways that are always present. Last year a "runaway house" and two foster-care homes looked after 462 girls and 556 boys.

Some youngsters run away because of school problems, or a longing for adventure, or because of quarrels with parents, or neglect or brutality in the home. Perhaps some run away because that is now a socially acceptable thing. One boy ran away because his parents refused to buy him a $400 stereo set.

More girls than boys get arrested. An encouraging fact is that some 75 per cent of the youngsters go home after an average of three days. About half of the runaways come from broken homes. What is sad is that some of the youngsters are "throw-aways," which means that their parents don't want them, and won't accept collect telephone calls from them. In such cases the youngster has to be put in a foster-home, or a "group home." People who know say that it is getting harder to get youngsters to go back into their families than it was before.

In some of the runaway homes, "crashers," who are just looking for a free bed, aren't accepted. The youth must accept counselling, medical attention and phychological or psychiatric care if he or she needs it.

One girl of 15, when interviewed, said she was on her sixth runaway since she was 11. She said she could not get along with her parents. Some runaways remain with friends nearby.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 30-day jail term was ordered in provincial court Wednesday for a man already serving six months definite and 18 months indeterminate on theft charges. William Randall Hess, 21, of Oliver, B.C., pleaded guilty to shoplifting food worth $1.51 from a Calgary supermarket last Sept. 24, then escaping through the window of the manager's office.

He is serving the six months for breaking, entering and theft involving more than $50. Judge William Ostler ordered the 30 day term be served concurrently with the longer sentence.

★ ★ ★

Blair Fraser Dickson, 20, was sentenced to two months in jail for stealing a $55 watch from Golden Cameo, 1035 Fort, May 2.

Dickson's record included a three-month sentence in 1971 for possession of stolen property, and a 10-month term in 1970 for trafficking in hashish.

★ ★ ★

Walter J. Martens, 29, of Work Point Barracks, was fined $150 for common assault.

He originally had been charged with assaulting a police officer after a fracas May 3 in the breath test room at city police headquarters.

Kerry Duncan, 17, of Sidney, was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation after she and a juvenile companian shoplifted two sweaters worth $6.99 from The Bay, May 9.

"Is there some discussion among students about how easy it is to shoplift these days?" Ostler asked the accused.

The girl said there wasn't.

"If there is, I hope you will tell the others about how it feels to appear in court and the grievous burden" of a criminal record the judge said.

★ ★ ★

Terry A. Mullaney, found guilty following a trial April 27 of attempted breaking and entering, was given a suspended sentence and placed on one year's probation.

★ ★ ★

Reginald Alexander Ross, 16, of 385 Baker, was fined $400 for impaired driving May 7 on Government, and another $50 after police said he took a taxi back to his parked car and drove it home after being released at police headquarters. He was prohibited from driving for four months except for work purposes.

★ ★ ★

Michael George David, 17, of 657 Pine, was given a suspended sentence and placed on one year's probation for kicking in the glass doors of two downtown business firms. Value of the damaged doors was $145.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Robinson sentenced two men to 14 days in jail for repeated driving offences. They were George Thomas Nestor, 43, of 248 West Burnside, and Jack Gilbert Lewis, 36, of 4780 Pat Bay Highway.

Outdoor Art Classes Scheduled

Painting in the Parks classes, sponsored by the Federation of Canadian Artists, will meet this summer in many local parks.

The outdoor drawing and painting classes for youngsters aged six to 16 meet every summer in Victoria and Vancouver parks. They are operated with co-operation from the parks board and the public recreation commission.

Registration forms are available from all Victoria schools, or Painting in the Parks, 31 Jedburgh Road, Victoria.

A $15 fee, paid at registration, is asked for the six-week program. All the students' supplies are provided.

Beat Those Insects With Herb Plantings

This year when planting cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower and others of the same (crucifer) family, why not put in herb plants with them as a try against insect infestations?

Many a good cabbage plant has been discarded when found covered with grey aphis or with the velvety green cabbage worm.

The only thing many of us found acceptable as a control was salt. If applied from a shaker early in the morning while the plants are damp, the insects will be found dead later. If no dew, make a salt solution and sprinkle this over the insects. Later in the day, hose off with clear water.

Now we are advised to make our herb sowings in between the various cabbage types in the same rows. They will grow in the spacings allowed from one cabbage plant to the next, their fragrances masking the typical cabbage odor enough to confound cabbage pests.

To district the white cabbage butterfly (which lays the eggs of the green cabbage work) Beatrice Hunter the English herb grower and author of Gardening Without Poisons, suggests planting tansy, orange colored nasturtiums, and sage.

Years ago we found that mint (grown in quart-sized juice cans to prevent spreading) distracted the butterflies successfully causing them to fly elsewhere to lay eggs. The cans were set part way into the ground (to prevent drying out) between the cabbages, cauliflowers and broccoli. No cabbage caterpillars when we did this.

In the home garden it is worth trying for a season or two and keeping recorded notes of results. A stock of pungent herbs grown in quart cans will be mobile enough to be useful wherever the cabbage crops are planted. The annual herbs can be seeded between, renewable each year. You'll have ample green pickings all year too.

Tansy leaves will repel moths in the house from laying eggs among woollens, in wool rugs, or chesterfields. The leaves also make a refreshing herb tea infused with lemon balm leaves.

Nasturtium leaves and young flowers have been salad ingredients for years and the seeds too, apart from pickling them.

So useful are all these plants that we might as well try them in their double role as insect repellants. By growing the cabbage family "clean," in good soil, we gain advantages all around—watering needed less often while the plants grow; less washing required when preparing them for a meal; therefore more flavor when we eat the cabbage, broccoli or cauliflower either raw or cooked; and because the flavor is good, there is the bonus of enjoyment in meals — surely the goal of every vegetable gardener.

A. J. Macself, the English horticulturist, as late as 1937 recommended spraying with salt solution of two teaspoonsful to one gallon of water every day until these pests were controlled.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Just how important luck can be in a duplicate game can be evidenced in today's deal. In it, the North-South pair whose bidding sequence is presented here, arrived at an inferior game contract when a superior one was available to them. But the adversely-held cards were divided most favorably. The result was that they outscored each of the other North-South pairs.

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH
♠ Q J 10 4 3

◊ A 10 3
♣ Q J 7 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♡.

The normal contract on the North-South cards was five clubs. This was arrived at usually with North bidding five clubs directly over South's raise to three clubs. At five clubs, North's only losers were two tricks to West's ace of hearts and East's king of spades. For fulfilling this contract, North-South scored 400 points (trick score of 100, plus 300 for a non-vulnerable game).

Against South's four-spade contract, West won the opening lead with his ace of hearts. He then continued with a second heard lead, South ruffing. Declarer next led a spade to dummy's ace, after which he returned a spade. When East played low, South put up his queen.

With a prayer that the two spades still outstanding were divided 1-1, South then made a third spade lead. As luck would have it, the spades were divided 1-1, East's king winning the trick as West's eight-spot fell.

A heart lead by East was then made, and ruffed with South's last trump. Next came the queen of clubs, West followed with the nine-spot, and South took a successful finesse. The rest of the tricks belonged to declarer, since all of dummy's clubs were winners. Of course, if the club finesse had been unsuccessful, East would have returned a heart, and West would have cashed a couple of heart tricks.

For bidding and making four spades, North-South secured a score of 450 (120 for the trick score, 30 points for an overtrick, and 300 for a non-vulnerable game.) And no matter what arithmetic system is used, 450 counts more than 400 (five clubs bid and made).

Had this been a rubber-bridge game, our actual North declarer would surely have bid five clubs (instead of three spades). But in a duplicate game especially, one learns to eschew five-club and five-diamond contracts. The reason can be observed in this deal.

FUNDY BAY 'EBB-TIDE' HIT

HALIFAX (CP) — The Bay of Fundy tidal power development project is in a state of "suspended animation," due to poor leadership, Dr. T. J. Gray, director of the Atlantic Industrial Research Institute, charged Wednesday.

He said a "dynamic approach" to the proposed billion-dollar tidal project is needed if it is ever to be realized.

Researchers have estimated that up to 4.8 million horsepower of electricity could be developed by harnessing the bay's tidal action, which, at 53 feet between high and low tides, is the highest in the world.

Dr. Gray said in an interview that the Tidal Power Corp., an agency of the Nova Scotia government established in the spring of 1971 to promote development of the project, lacked the needed leadership.

Plans by a joint federal-provincial review board, established in February to review a 1968 feasibility study which said the development was not economical, have been kept quiet, he said.

"No one knows what's going on."

The six-man review biard was appointed by federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald and includes representatives from both New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

"No one seems to care," said Dr. Gray, a faculty member at Nova Scotia Technical College here.

"An active rather than a passive corporation" could put pressure on federal and provincial authorities to renew talks and study on the project.

Dr. Gray, co-editor of a recently-published book on tidal power, said many factors have changed since the 1968 study, including costs of producing power by other methods and the increasing requirement for electricity in the northeastern United States, but those in charge of the project have failed to meet these challenges.

URGES NEW GROUP

An independent organization should be established to undertake a study of the project and its terms of reference should include a penalty clause to ensure against any conflict of interest.

Dr. Gray said some people associated with the project in the past could stand to gain a great deal of money from the project.

"Although their intentions were honorable, they could be open to charges of conflict of interest," he said.

Dr. Gray said if the project was initiated, it would encourage development of manufacturing industries, both primary and secondary, such as the construction of generators, concrete forms for offshore and marine development and numerous service centres.

It could be a regional project through which a large multi-national corporation could be developed and the benefits kept in the region, he said.

Dr. Gray also suggested that too much emphasis had been placed on studying a tidal power project in France. A better system was developed in the Soviet Union.

He said data from the French project was valuable but work done at the Kislaya Guba power station in Russia also should be investigated.

$30,000 Boost by Ottawa For Canadian Musicians

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government and Canadian record manufacturers have become partners in a scheme to promote Canadian musicians and their music.

An Ottawa news release said Wednesday Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier had announced the government would contribute $30,000 to the project. The Canadian Recording Manufacturers' Association has put up $50,000.

Total cost of the project, called Maple Leaf Junket, which will bring as many as 100 writers, editors, broadcasters, producers and film makers from 14 European countries to Canada, is estimated at close to $100,000.

At a news conference here Wednesday to announce details of the project, Ritchie Yorke, pop columnist who originated the idea and is co-ordinator of the event, said the difference will probably be made up through sale of tickets to concerts and possible release to theatres of a film of the concerts.

Five concerts are scheduled between June 2 and 8 for the benefit of the visiting Europeans but will be open to the public.

The first two in Montreal will be French-language concerts, details of which are to be announced at a news conference there Monday.

An English-language concert will be presented in the same city June 5. Performed at the Place des Arts, it will feature The Poppy Family, Andre Gagnon, Moe Koffman, Frank Mills, Anne Murray, The Stampeders and Tapestry.

On June 6, the first of two concerts at Massey Hall in Toronto will feature Gary Buck, Bruce Cockburn, The Perth County Conspiracy, Fergus, Christopher Kearney, Murray McLauchlan, and the Mercey Brothers.

Taking part in the June 7 concert will be April Wine, Chilliwack, Crowbar, Edward Bear, Fludd, Lighthouse and Mashmakhan.

The performers were selected by an independent talent committee made up of retailers, broadcasters and journalists.

Some record company executives said Wednesday that some of the performers they record will be going to Europe after Junket, as part of follow-up promotion.

Mr. Yorke said that of 100 Europeans invited 70 "have positively said they are coming." Trade observers from the United States have also been invited.

In addition to the concerts, the guests, while in Montreal, will attend a screening of Canadian films. A final dinner in Toronto at the Royal York Hotel will be attended by Pierre Juneau, chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission and other government officials.

Age of Communication

Victoria Times
FOURTH SECTION
family
WENDY DEY — EDITOR

A degree from a school of journalism or broadcasting doesn't necessarily guarantee a job. Although most big city newspapers now look for university types, a journalism graduate with no experience would almost certainly lose out to an experienced reporter with no degree. A degree may give you a foot in the door — but little more.

Has Own Show

Daphne Goode, 19, now has her own show on Cable, 10, Victoria. She is hostess for the Island Hobbyist, Thursdays at 7 p.m.

Catherine Barker, assistant program director at Cable 10, was able to study television production during her last two years at Cowichan Senior Secondary in Duncan.

After graduation, she went to Montreal and Halifax to work in radio. Miss Barker had no trouble finding jobs because of her high school training in television and secretarial work.

She returned to Victoria to work in the department of visual arts at the University of Victoria until September, 1970, when she was offered the job at Cable 10.

Miss Barker also has her own show, Ladies First, Monday evenings at 7 p.m.

She advises students interested in a career in television to take any courses available in high schools and then travel for a year working in as many different "aspects" of television and broadcasting as possible. She suggests students work as volunteers at local radio stations, if no course is offered at their school.

Although lucky breaks can still happen occasionally, most students had better rely on a sound training in the communications field.

PR Option

The University of Western Ontario offers a public relations option to journalism students.

Students at Carleton may major in journalism alone, or combine journalism with honors work in arts, science, commerce or engineering.

Graduates with a bachelor's degree in another discipline may take a one-year program at Western or Carleton to qualify for a diploma in journalism or Bachelor of Journalism degree.

Other universities, such as the University of Victoria, offer courses in creative writing. The teaching program at the centre for communications and the arts at Simon Fraser University is the only one of its kind in North America.

Professional Team

The centre does not grant degrees and work in the program is non-credit, but students have the opportunity to work with practising professionals. The centre's film program is the only university program in Canada specifically oriented toward production, rather than film study and appreciation.

The videotape workshop provides students with training in all areas of video production and experimental techniques. Crews produce weekly programs for Cable 10, Vancouver.

Several Canadian universities offer courses in film as optional courses within the department of fine arts or drama. The department of visual arts at the University of Victoria provides training in film and photography.

Students may obtain a bachelor's degree with concentration in film from York University, Toronto. A four-year program or one-year diploma program for arts graduates is available at Loyola, Montreal.

Several community colleges across Canada offer courses in journalism. Students receive a background in the liberal arts as well as specialized training in layout and design, editing, broadcasting, photography, and the fundamentals of printing and typesetting. Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, Toronto, emphasizes practical experience and daily reporting. Its student newspaper is operated along the lines of a large metropolitan daily newspaper.

Common Year

The business management division of the British Columbia Institute of Technology has a two-year course in broadcast communications technology. Students take a common first year, but beginning in the fall of 1973 will select one of four electives in second year. The electives are: radio production, television production, radio and television news or audio-visual technician.

A two-year television, stage and radio arts program has also been established at the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology.

Initiatives Grant Helps Home Industry

A program to aid cottage industry on Vancouver Island will now be able to continue until September, thanks to an additional grant from the federal government.

The $23,000 grant, made available to Island Home Industries Ltd. through the local initiatives program, will allow the 15-man company to travel all of Vancouver Island, instead of merely the Greater Victoria area, said Jeanne Wallace, a weaver and marketing adviser.

Local craftsmen have already been invited to exhibit at trade fairs in Dallas and New York and Miss Wallace has compiled a sales book of photographs and samples to increase market prospects. She emphasized, however, that local stores will still get first opportunity to sell items produced on Vancouver Island.

Dale Peterson, an engineer and member of the Home Industries team, will travel to the Maritimes this summer to examine co-operative organizations of craftsmen there and study processing techniques.

Technology Only Means to an End

OTTAWA (CP) — Science and technology should be considered as tools for reaching society's goals rather than as goals in themselves, the Science Council of Canada said Wednesday.

The council was reporting to a news conference its comments on recommendations made earlier this year by the Senate committee on science policy.

The council said it differed in three main areas with the Senate committee, but the "most profound divergence" concerned the purpose of science and technology.

Implicit in the Senate's report is a danger that science and technology could be regarded as goals in themselves, the council said.

The council opposed budgetary targets for stimulation of research and development. The Senate committee recommended that national expenditure on research and development should reach 2.5 per cent of the gross national product by 1980.

The science council also differed with the Senate committee over separation of basic and applied research.

"The council seriously questions the desirability of separating basic and applied research — in its performance, funding, administration and communication. This, we feel, is a retrograde step and runs counter to the whole weight of evidence on the advantages of interaction."

Centralization of government science and technology into a few agencies, leaving the departments with diminished scientific competence, also was criticized in the science council report.

"Canada's real need is to redirect those departmental programs which no longer are squarely oriented toward their missions."

The third major area of disagreement with the Senate committee concerns the emphasis on research and development activities as a means to promote industrial innovation, the report said.

A policy that increases research and development without also considering the other aspects would not meet the desired objective—"which we share with the senators"—of increasing innovative capabilities of industries."

Cure for Ignorance

DEAR ABBY: Have you a solution to this problem? Our brother married this lovely girl who happens to be of a different race.

She is intelligent and respectable. The problem is our parents refuse to meet her. It has been two years now and we, the younger generation of the family, are getting fed up.

We know that our parents are prejudiced because of their own upbringing, but how can they judge her without even meeting her?

What can we do? There are six of us. — The Klan

DEAR KLAN: Prejudice is caused by ignorance. The only cure for ignorance is education. There is nothing you can do for those who refuse to learn. Don't fight it; it's their loss.

DEAR ABBY: I read a letter in your column about a couple who announced on their 25th wedding anniversary that they were being divorced. The writer asked, "Can anybody top this?"

Well, I can:

A couple was being honored on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary. After the dinner, the golden wedding couple were appropriately toasted, then the bride of 50 years stood up and said, "Herman and I have had 50 years of marriage. It hasn't always been a bed of roses. In fact, it has been rougher than most of you know. I liked canasta. Herman liked the horse races. (We always went to the races.) I wanted to travel and see the world. Herman thought one trip a year was plenty, so we never went anywhere else.

We've raised our children and they are raising theirs. We have done our duty, but what I am getting at is this: Please don't be surprised if you hear that we are calling this partnership quits."

Some thought Mamma had a little bit too much champagne. Maybe she did. But they now have a legal separation. — True Story

Arthritis Symptoms Unexplained

Following is the second of three articles on arthritis, a crippling and painful disease that hits women far more often than men.

By NANCY B. CLARKE
Special to the Times

Rheumatoid arthritis has many mysterious aspects.

One of these is the curious instance of the seeming disappearance of symptoms. The phenomenon is called remission. The swelling in the joints and the pain and stiffness sometimes disappear for a month or even for years.

Another unexplained feature of this mainly women's disease, which strikes five million Americans, is its tendency to involve joints in symmetrical fashion. If one finger is involved on the left hand, it's a good bet that symptoms will appear in the same finger on the right hand.

A study done some 12 years ago in the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania arthritis clinic revealed that of the new patients coming in, 15 per cent had had some type of emotional shock or stress in the preceding 24 months.

Stress a Factor

Other studies have revealed a similar percentage, according to a Philadelphia rheumatologist. He emphasized that stress doesn't cause the disease but only has been known to contribute to the onset or flare-up.

He told the story of a young woman who developed rheumatoid arthritis soon after her marriage in the early 1940s. Because of her mother's objections to the marriage she had been the victim of strong emotional pressure.

Through the next 20 years the mother continued to interfere and be a source of upset to her daughter.

"Flare-up through those years tended to coincide with difficulties with the mother," the physician said. "Finally, other members of the family took over the responsibility of the mother and after this, the patient's normally bright, happy personality surfaced, and she complained less of pain."

Mother Trouble

Another case in the physician's file also involved an interfering mother who did not approve of her daughter's husband. The daughter has rheumatoid arthritis in the knees and toes, in one or two small joints of the fingers and in a shoulder.

"When she sees her mother it flares up," the physician said. "Other times she gets around quite well. She's been episodic for about 15 years."

These cases are in no way intended to give the impression that women get rheumatoid arthritis more frequently because they are more emotional. "That," said the physician, "would be a very difficult thesis to prove."

Emotional stress, for example, has been associated with the onset of gout, a painful form of arthritis which most often attacks men. Women do get rheumatoid arthritis more frequently than men, however.

Dr. Morris A. Bowie, a rheumatologist who was twice president of the Eastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation, said there is a wide range of speculation about this fact, but that the sex ratio of three to one, women to men, has never been adequately explained.

"There is no conclusive evidence that hormonal imbalance is directly related to rheumatoid arthritis, but speculations have nonetheless gone on about this for some years," Dr. Bowie said.

When you see an old man or woman walking stiffly down the street with a cane, chances are the elderly person has osteoarthritis.

Primarily, osteoarthritis is a matter of "wear and tear" with cartilage of a joint wearing out as a person gets older. Most often affected are the weight-bearing joints — the knees, hips and the spine.

Osteoarthritis can begin showing up in the 40s and is often related to the physical stress and strain of a person's occupation. A football player may get it in his knees, a ballet dancer in her ankles.

It is usually mild, rarely cripples, and unlike rheumatoid arthritis, which is inflammatory, spreading from joint to joint and affecting the whole body, osteoarthritis confines its attack locally to individual joints. Inflammation is rarely a problem.

Different Variety

There is, however, a variety of the disease that is not related to strain on the joints and which may come on in the late 40s, most often in women. The joints of the fingers and sometimes of the toes are the chief points of attack. Heberden's nodes — bony enlargements of the end joints of the fingers — often develop and can be quite painful.

"Heredity is the most important predisposing factor in Heberden's nodes and in gout," Dr. Bowie said.

Other major forms of arthritis are juvenile rheumatoid arthritis, similar to the adult form; gouty arthritis, which has about one million victims in the U.S., and ankylosing spondylitis, a disease of the spine similar to rheumatoid arthritis which attacks men ten times as often as women and which usually stops of its own accord after a few years.

Over the past 20 years some strides have been made in research but still no one knows the cause or cure for arthritis.

Gout Defeated

Treatment of gout represents one victory. Medication is now available to control it effectively.

Creating the biggest stir was the discovery by Drs. Philip S. Hench and Edward C. Kendall and associates at the Mayo Clinic that cortisone and ACTH (adrenocorticotrophic hormone) produce dramatic improvement in rheumatoid arthritis. The announcement was made in the spring of 1949.

However, it has been found that although cortisone and other steroid drugs are effective in reducing pain and inflammation, the oral preparations have serious side effects. They are useful in special situations but are being prescribed less and less in the routine treatment of rheumatoid arthritis.

Gold salts, which reduce the severity of rheumatoid inflammation, have been commonly used for years in the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis and, through recent studies, have been given new status as an effective therapeutic agent for the treatment of the disease.

"Aspirin or a similar drug is probably the single best analgesic preparation for relief of pain in osteoarthritis as well as rheumatoid arthritis," Dr. Bowie said. "It is the safest of all the drugs currently in use and one on which we rely."

A spokesman for the Arthritis Foundation emphasized that aspirin can be made to be more effective when taken under the supervision of a physician and in large, regular doses, day after day — even during periods when pain and swelling have subsided and the patient is feeling better.

In addition to drugs, rest, therapeutic exercises and heat are used in treatment of rheumatoid arthritis. In the past several years, surgery has produced "undreamed of" results in correcting deformities and disabilities due to the disease.

As there are mysteries connected with chronic arthritis, there are also many misconceptions identified with it. One of these misconceptions is that there really isn't very much one can do for arthritis. There is much that doctors can do.

Rheumatologists stress the importance of getting to a physician as soon as signs or symptoms are noticed, because often early treatment can control progress of the disease and can even prevent crippling.

Early Diagnosis

Dr. Bowie commented on the importance of early diagnosis in rheumatoid arthritis.

"Treatment started early and usually continued for life can mean freedom from crippling and lessening of the pain for the patient. Gold salt injections can often give remission for years, possibly indefinitely."

Women will be the main beneficiaries of research into arthritis because, overall, more women develop it than men.

Of the more than 17 million Americans who have some form of it severe enough to require medical care, 12 million are women.

And women stand to benefit even more, because most of today's research is focused on the nation's number one crippling disease, rheumatoid arthritis.

Bridal Gown Business Hit By Ad Tax Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — Tax regulations designed to help Canadian publishers are hurting Canadian manufacturers of bridal gowns, Marcel Lambert PC—Edmonton West said this week.

He said the gown-makers are deterred from advertising in U.S. publications because such advertising cannot be deducted as a business expense.

MEDIC-ALERT VALUE NOTED

This month has been proclaimed Medic-Alert month by the mayors of Saanich and Victoria as part of a program to protect people with hidden medical problems.

The Canadian Medic-Alert Foundation is a charitable, non-profit organization with a membership of over 50,000. Its members suffer from a wide variety of medical complaints, ranging from epilepsy, rare blood groups, allergies to diabetes and amnesia. Failure to recognize these factors, when a sufferer is victim of collapse or accident, says the foundation, can result in further health risks, or even death, for the victim.

To help identify such complaints when the sufferer is unable to do so himself, the foundation gives, along with life membership, a stainless steel bracelet or necklet. On this are inscribed a warning to physicians of the accident or seizure victim's problems, along with the internationally-recognized Medic-Alert insignia and the 24-hour emergency phone number that doctors may call to establish details of the victim's case.

One measure of the need for such identification is the fact that it is estimated that one member in every Canadian family has some hidden medical problem which needs information for proper medical treatment in an emergency. The Medic-Alert Foundation conducts a continual year-around educational program to familiarize people with the meaning of their emblem and its warning message.

Further details are available from life insurance agents or by writing to the Canadian Medic-Alert Foundation, 174 St. George St., Toronto 5, Ont.

Hemisphere Meet Stresses Need for Sex Education

OTTAWA (CP) — Support for sex education in schools and increased emphasis on the population growth problems were recommended at this week's final sessions of the Western Hemisphere conference of the International Family Planning Federation.

But one delegate said the abortion issue had illustrated the wide differences in attitude on the subject. He asked that his name or country not be mentioned.

"How can one draw up a resolution on abortion when some countries are against abortion, some are in favor of abortion and a third group are neutral?" he asked.

'End in Jail'

He also said that some of the resolutions must be carefully worded or members of the national associations could end up in jail.

In many countries, including some Latin American countries, abortion is unlawful and support of a resolution would damage the relationship of the association, which now is supported for its family-planning programs.

However, one resolution recommended that member associations should do all in their power to influence governments to begin sex education programs.

Pressure Avoided

Again, the wording was worked out carefully so that pressure is not placed on member associations which promote family-planning measures only to space children and where some South American politicians have urged that families should be large to provide more workers.

During the final open sessions at the three-day meeting, which brought together about 200 delegates from about 35 countries, several speakers described new programs that try to take birth control and family-planning information to those who most need it.

Dr. R. Gonzalez Cerrutti of Caracas described a Venezuelan program whereby a woman is provided with birth-control information immediately after she has had a baby or an abortion.

This is the most effective way of reaching the "high-risk" group of women who are in their child-bearing years and who are in an "accepting frame of mind."

Dr. Cyril Greenland of McMaster University in Hamilton described a study on house-to-house visits by volunteers providing information on family planning.

Basement Policy Turns Into Hideous Reality

For years now, we've been musing aloud to each other, "We really must tackle the basement one of these days."

It wasn't until we were faced with a move that cleaning the basement shifted from being a statement to a hideous reality.

Besides acting as custodian for the things that we need once a year, like Halloween masks and the Christmas tree stand, our basement has become the final resting place for things that we'll probably never need, like a leaky aquarium and a repair kit for an air mattress that we left in Yellowstone National Park two years ago.

Unfortunately, while mulling over recent acquisitions, we stumbled over past memorabilia, like a five-year-old plaster cast of our son's hand. By the time we all had attempted to fit our hands into the mold (an event much like visiting the sidewalk in front of Grauman's Chinese Theatre and taking turns standing in John Wayne's boots) we had consumed twenty minutes.

"All right, now," my husband announced. "First we ditch these rocks."

One Rock Compromise

"I'm not paying $3.50 each to move rocks. There are rocks at our new house." We finally compromised on one rock. Which will probably go right into our new basement.

"What about this?" I asked, handing him a wooden paddle.

"You expect me to give up my fraternity paddle?!!" he exclaimed, as if I'd demanded that he cut off his ear.

"What memories?"

"I remember being hit and hating it a lot," he admitted, tossing the paddle onto the Rocky Mountain rocks.

Not knowing what else to do with them, we gave the whole lot to the Salvation Army. We were surprised they took the stuff. Somewhere there are people less fortunate than we who are happily carting fourteen rocks and a fraternity paddle down to their basement. More likely the Salvation Army didn't want to hurt our feelings.

After-Hours Use Survey Planned For New School

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis offered staff and financial assistance Wednesday evening for a survey of residents in the area of a new high school planned for Burnside.

The proposed survey is a project of the citizens' advisory group which is trying to plan for community use of the new school. Curtis made his offer of assistance at a public meeting in the Ewing Building of Camosun College organized by the advisory group.

"Input from the people is so rare that it has to be encouraged," said Curtis. He promised research people and "some reasonable amount of money" to help conduct the survey, which will try to discover the community and recreational needs of the area.

"I think we could match (the municipality of Saanich) dollar for dollar," said Allan McKinnon, chairman of the board of trustees of the Greater Victoria School Board. McKinnon also promised experienced help in preparing the questionnaire and analyzing results.

The new school will be at the corner of Burnside an Acorn, and should be open in late 1973 or early 1974. It will handle 950 secondary students initially. The citizens' advisory group has been meeting for two months to try to incorporate a community school concept, serving the needs of all the community, into the new school.

School trustee Peter Bunn warned the group that citizens must press their case strongly to provincial politicians or the community school project would falter.

The project involves "some lawbending at very least, if not some changes" in the law, said Bunn.

A school with facilities to serve both students and the community would be cost-shared by the municipality and school board. At the moment the Public Schools Act prohibits the sharing of school maintenance costs, said trustee Dr. Carron Jameson.

Dr. Jameson advised the group to get their survey done as quickly as possible so they can go after politicians and seek their support before the next provincial election.

"If we could find out what the people really want and match this with what is possible, we just might come up with something great," said Len Stevenson, chairman of the advisory group's committee on the community use of the school.

Until the survey is done to find out what people want, the committee can't do much more, Stevenson said.

About 45 people attended the meeting.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 29): Good lunar aspect now coincides with times when children, persons young in heart come into your life. Leo figures prominently. Bring forth creative abilities. Imprint your own style. Do what comes naturally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The end, the completion of efforts and assignments—this is highlighted. You work for what you get — but what you do obtain will be worthwhile. Don't duck issues. Face facts as they actually exist.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may be trying to be too many places at once. Key is to be true to your own feelings. Trying to please or placate neighbors, relatives could drain energy for naught. Know it and pull in reins.

FIRMS TOLD TO ACCEPT GOV'T ROLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Quebec economic consultant said today that industry must shoulder much of the blame for steadily deteriorating relations with government because it has failed to comprehend the growing importance of the public sector.

Marcel Belanger, of Quebec City, discussed government-industry relations during a panel discussion on policy at a business conference sponsored by the Conference Board in Canada.

He said government expenditures as a percentage of the Gross National Product now amount to 35 per cent and this will probably reach 40 per cent by 1975.

Industry, he said, must accept the increasing role of government as a "fait accompli," and must try to work out strategy accordingly. On the other hand, government must streamline its machinery to eliminate "a great deal of waste" in human and capital resources.

Mr. Belanger, chairman of Quebec's royal commission on taxation, said industry has no single unified voice with which it can speak to government.

Consequently, the input of industry in the consulting process on new legislation has been "rather poor in the past."

He recalled that when he was chairman of the taxation commission, many of the briefs he heard from companies were little more than collections of superficial generalities.

"Too many presentations started with a hymn to free enterprise, developed the idea that their particular industry constituted a special case, and ended up with the conclusion that taxation is a wonderful thing provided it falls on a neighbor's back."

Canadian industrialists often don't take into account "the very difficult task" that faces the federal and provincial governments in setting goals and priorities for the country and its provinces.

The extremists have a common enemy, said Mr. Bwlanger, which is "The Establishment"—government and industry lumped together.

"In fact, why should they be enemies?" he asked.

He suggested that government must also improve its mechanisms in the consulting process. Each government department, Mr. Belanger said, should have an advisory committee of experts drawn from all facets of the economy.

At the national level, the federal government should consider establishment of an advisory "supercommittee" such as the Conseil Economique et Social in France "with strong representation from the different sectors," he said.

$50,000 Damage

DELTA (CP) — Fire caused an estimated $50,000 damage Wednesday to a pizza restaurant just ready to open. Delta fire chief Ray Miles said the blaze, which apparently was caused by a lighted cigarette left behind, destroyed about 70 per cent of the building.

Inflation Warning Sounded

VANCOUVER (CP) — An investment company president warned today that a lack of domestic financial participation in huge projects envisioned by government during the 1970s could trigger a rise in the Canadian dollar exchange rate and a return to inflation.

George T. Richardson, of Winnipeg, sounded the warning at a one-day business-outlook conference.

"Unless a relatively large proportion of the financing for such projects as a northern pipeline can be undertaken by Canadians, capital inflows are likely to be excessive," he said.

Strand Downplays China Trade

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Kenneth Strand, president of Simon Fraser University, said today changes in American economic policies and Britain's planned entry into the European Common Market raise the question of a third trading bloc involving Canada.

"Both of these events have pronounced impact on Canadian policy inasmuch as the United States is Canada's largest trading partner and because Canada has had preferential arrangements with the United Kingdom and through that with Australia and New Zealand," he said.

"This raises the general policy question of whether Canada should be a partner in the creation of a new trading bloc, and if so, whether the key partners in such a trading bloc shall be the U.S. or Japan, or both."

It was a question Dr. Strand did not attempt to answer in a speech to a panel discussion on Pacific trade at a one-day conference organized by the Conference Board in Canada.

"I suggest that these questions are of such magnitude that they are entitled to more analysis than I have given them today."

But he did warn industrialists against overestimating Canada's trading potential with China. That nation's policy, he said, is aimed at internal self-sufficiency and the Chinese step outside their own production capacity only "to pick up the shortfalls" in goods and raw materials.

Alaska Called Colony of Japan

VANCOUVER (CP) — An American mining corporation executive says his country's shipping laws are destroying the United States merchant fleet and encouraging Alaska to become an economic colony of Japan.

C. W. Robinson, president of the San Francisco-based Marcona Corporation, was speaking today at a Conference Board in Canada panel session on resources and transportation.

Existing American laws, he said, prevent foreign vessels from moving goods from one port within the U.S. to another, such as from Alaska to San Francisco.

"Insulation from foreign competition combined with dictatorial control by national labor organizations has destroyed the vitality and competitive strength of our U.S. flag fleet — and of protected fleets in other nations," said Mr. Robinson.

"This has resulted in a substantial increase in domestic flag operating costs compared with international flag carriers.

"To put this in a better perspective, the cost of moving oil or bulk materials from Alaska to Japan by international carrier is about half the cost of a similar movement to U.S. West Coast ports by U.S. flag vessel and about one-fifth of the cost to our East Coast."

Ottawa's View on Fish Sought

QUEBEC (CP) — The Fisheries Council of Canada wound up its four-day annual convention Wednesday with a plea for more consultation between government and industry in a time of increasing demand, diminishing supplies, and growing headaches over pollution problems and international resource management.

The council heard predictions of continued heavy demand for available supplies of major Canadian commercial fish stocks and little in the near future to ease the pressure, which has sent prices skyrocketing in the last two or three years.

The more than 500 delegates attending the convention were told that strict new federal standards for pollution control at fish plants would be outlined generally by July and applied in their final form early next year.

A federal government official said early in the conference that the industry's demand for a proclamation of Canadian owner-ship of fish stocks inside the continental shelf was unrealistic.

Despite this, a resolution was passed again this year calling for an outright declaration of ownership of all fish spawning in Canadian waters.

The council claims Canada cannot manage the resource unless it exerts absolute sovereignty over it, with foreign fishing only by Canadian permission for "Canadian" fish.

Two other resolutions scored the alleged lack of consultation between federal officials and the industry and left little doubt the barbs were aimed directly at Environment Minister Jack Davis.

One, focusing on federal closure of the east coast sealing season, accused the minister of a "steam roller" tactic that had to be nipped quickly "before it becomes a way of life."

Another claimed a general lack of consultation within the last year — "consultation promised and expected, and until recently, normally received."

It reminded Mr. Davis the council considers the industry a "partnership."

Denis Monroe, 41, of St. John's, Nfld., new council president, echoed this sentiment in a brief acceptance speech Wednesday night, when he claimed there had been a lack of consultation and, when the industry was heard it was not always heeded.

The council noted increasing involvement of the Canadian fisheries industry with complex issues of international law and treaties and said there is a "priority" need for an international fisheries section within Mr. Davis' department.

Toronto Workers Balk

TORONTO (CP) — While crews struggled to clean up the city's parks and streets after settlement of the 30-day garbage strike outside workers in four boroughs balked at the terms accepted by Metro garbagemen.

When Local 43, Canadian struck last month, York, North York, East York and Scarborough laid off their garbage workers because dumping sites were picketed by members of the city and Metro local.

Metropolitan Toronto is made up of the city of Toronto and five boroughs, those mentioned above and Etobicoke.

Now the borough workers, members of locals 114, 368, 10 and 94 CUPE, are seeking their own contracts and they are not impressed by the terms accepted by Local 43.

"That's not a settlement, that's a saw-off," CUPE national representative A. K. Cunningham, said Wednesday.

"No other local in the area is going to voluntarily settle on the same basis as Local 43. . . . In that settlement in dollars and cents they were literally talking peanuts. . . . We're not going to play games."

Local 43 accepted an eight-per-cent pay raise in 1972 with the increase for 1973 to be subject to arbitration, if the parties cannot agree within 15 days of their return to work.

Mr. Cunningham said the garbagemen and other outside workers in the four boroughs will demand the settlement previously granted by the Borough of Etobicoke — a 15-per-cent increase over two years.

CHOW LINE AWAITS MINISTERS

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The provincial cabinet won't have to bring those sandwiches for a civic dinner here May 31. The ministers, instead, will join the chow line in a construction camp cafeteria.

"We can always bring sandwiches."

But Mayor Gordon Nicol of Kamloops and Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd. had other ideas. So the civic dinner for the premier and his ministers will be held in a cafeteria used by the 1,200 men building an extension to the Kamloops pulp mill.

Weyerhaeuser will pay the bill.

POLLUTION FIGHTING PAYS

One hundred and twenty-eight children from Oliver Elementary School have found that fighting pollution can pay.

The children have raised more than $2,000 from bottle and can collections over a period of several months and the payoff came Wednesday when they had breakfast with Mines Minister Frank Richter following by a tour of the Legislative Buildings and the Provincial Museum.

Last year, the children made the news by sending 500 cans — on which they had been refused refunds — to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

At that time Peterson's office arranged the refund — which amounted to about $9 — and this amount was matched by Richter who represents the riding of Boundary-Similkameen in which Oliver is located.

The children tried to see Peterson Wednesday but he was on his way to Vancouver.

Egg Plan Stalling Condemned

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Federal officials are deliberately stalling a national egg-marketing plan, the annual meeting of the B.C. Egg Marketing Board was told.

Board member Peter Friesen said commitments sought by S. B. Williams, federal deputy minister of agriculture, "are a deliberate delaying tactic by his department to put into effect an assistance program for egg producers."

He was referring to stipulations that would include maintenance of free trade over provincial boundaries and provision for "the annual adjustment of provincial (egg) quotas in any marketing scheme which is developed."

Also, the provincial government was criticized after only two of 25 invited Social Credit MLAs showed up for a Fraser Valley tour.

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford and Vancouver-Burrard member Bert Price said they did not know why the other MLAs didn't take part. Among those invited were all government members of the legislature agriculture committee and eight cabinet members.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crimson Cinema 2000 Ltd. of Burnaby has been charged with possessing obscene matter for the purpose of exposure to the public. Similar charges, resulting from seizure of a film from a city store Feb. 25, have been laid against George McFall, company manager, and Gloria Perry.

Flow Halted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The provincial Water Rights Branch took the first step Wednesday aimed at easing a flood threat by the Fraser River.

Senior hydraulic engineer Dave Tanner said the water will be shut off for about a month, reducing the flow of the Fraser River at Hope by five to 10 per cent. He said it could make all the difference in preventing a flood on the lower mainland.

Tracks Phoney

HOPE (CP) — Sasquatch hunter John Green spent the night in the bush protecting what he now believes are phoney Sasquatch tracks. The tracks, discovered by school children, attracted sizeable crowds and Green spent the night on the site to protect them. He later concluded that the ground was too hard for even a Sasquatch to leave the tracks. He also could not explain why the prints appeared to start nowhere and end nowhere.

Tugboat Burns

PENDER HARBOR (CP) — The three-man crew of the 55-foot tugboat J. M. Swaine escaped unharmed Wednesday when fire destroyed the vessel while it was towing a boom near here, about 50 miles northwest of Vancouver. Cause of the fire is not known. The tug, owned by Ivar Gustafson of Powell River, was towing a boom from Powell River to Vancouver when it caught fire.

Union Violence Hits Montreal, Sept-Iles

Times News Services

The third straight day of labor unrest hit Quebec today as thousands of union members continued walkouts protesting both the jailing of three union leaders and their own working conditions.

Montreal and Sept-Isles, 400 miles northeast of Quebec City bore the brunt of the protest but other communities were also affected.

Two small bombs exploded today at two separate small power stations serving Montreal's subway system, causing some damage but not interfering with normal operations.

But motor traffic was in turmoil early today in the city after kegs of nails were dumped on one bridge and a main expressway. Police said the nails on the west-end Mercier bridge across the St. Lawrence River and on the north-end Metropolitan Expressway could "be tied in with the labor conflicts.

MECHANICS LEAVE

Also in Montreal 400 garage mechanics who service buses and subway trains for the public transit system left their jobs to join other sympathy walkouts across the province protesting the imprisonment Tuesday of Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau.

Union leaders said thousands of construction workers, who stayed away from building sites in Montreal and Quebec City Wednesday, were continuing the walkouts today.

There were conflicting reports about the possible resignation of two cabinet ministers from Premier Robert Bourassa's cabinet. Social Affairs Minister Claude Castonguay and Public Service Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier were reported to have moved to resign but this could not be confirmed officially.

Sept-Isles, the iron ore town, faced another tense day today after about 5,000 metal and construction workers agreed at a union rally to continue protest walkouts.

STAY OUT

At today's rally they said they would remain off the job until the three leaders — Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau — are released from jail.

Meanwhile, Mayor Donald Galliene said the situation in the town was peaceful. He appealed to the population of 18,000 to stay at home today if possible to avoid a repetition of Wednesday's clashes with police.

"I don't think we're going to have any more trouble," he said. "I've told everybody to stay home — that way we won't run into situations like we had yesterday."

The trouble began early Wednesday when union workers took control of radio station CKCN shortly after 9:30 a.m. and began making their own broadcasts.

SET UP ROADBLOCKS

Roadblocks were set up Wednesday by workers on all access roads to the town and battles with police broke out in the downtown area. At the height of the outbreaks, provincial police dropped cannisters of tear gas from a helicopter on the demonstrators.

One man drove into a crowd of protesters and injured 35 persons, one critically. Ten

Times News Services

The Soviet Union demanded today that the United States immediately cancel its "piratic" naval blockade of North Vietnam, warning that the U.S. was following "a dangerous and slippery road" which endangered international peace and security.

China joined in to denounce the U.S. action of planting mines in North Vietnam's harbors, calling the move "a flagrant provocation against the people of Vietnam and the world."

Shells from what the 7th Fleet said was the most powerful cruiser-destroyer fleet assembled in the western Pacific since the Second World War were striking within four miles of Haiphong.

At the same time, North Vietnamese land forces battled their way into the provincial capital of An Loc, which has been under siege since April 7. North Vietnamese also continued a heavy barrage on two other fronts — the central highlands and near Hue.

In Washington, President Nixon met two high ranking Soviet officials today — a surprise session which indicated to observers the increased U.S. offensive in Vietnam, and the resulting Soviet condemnation, still may not wreck the May 22 Moscow summit.

The Russian reaction, reported by the Tass News Agency and broadcast by Moscow Radio, pledged continued military help to North Vietnam and said if the United States wanted peace in Vietnam it should return to the Paris peace talk tables. No mention was made of Nixon's forthcoming visit to Moscow.

The Russians said no matter what false pretexts are used to cover up the adventurist actions of the U.S. armed forces in Vietnam the real purpose of these actions is obvious — "to save the notorious Vietnamization policy which suffers an obvious failure."

"These actions show again the whole world the piratic nature of the war which the United States has unleashed and continues against the Vietnamese people for many years."

In South Vietnam, President Nguyen Van Thieu signed new martial laws into effect today, subjecting citizens to more taxes, less fun, extended draft ages, press gangs and police searches.

Tankers To Ply West Coast

Times News Services

United States Interior Secretary Rogers Morton this afternoon approved construction of the controversial trans-Alaska pipeline, rejecting a proposed Canadian alternative down the Mackenzie River basin to Edmonton.

The decision means oil supertankers will be plying the British Columbia coast, through the Strait of Juan de Fuca to Cherry Point, Washington.

The sudden announcement, logy and environment of the come as a surprise in Ottawa where as late as Wednesday afternoon Energy and Resources Minister Donald MacDonald was telling the Commons Canada has again expressed its concern to Washington over the tanker plan.

CONDEMNED

Robert N. Thompson, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Red Deer, Alberta, who raised the issue Wednesday during the question period, today condemned the Liberal government for lack of concrete action on the issue.

"The Canadian government has not — repeat, not — carried the ball as they should have regarding an alternative pipeline route, therefore leaving the Americans wide open for approval of the TAPS (Trans Alaska Pipeline System), pipeline, and thereby endangering the whole B.C. Pacific coast," he said.

"For five days now, knowing that such a decision was coming," he said, "I have tried to get the minister and the prime minister to make some statement regarding their feasibility findings for a Mackenzie River pipeline."

The Mackenzie route, he said, is "the only alternative

MATTRESS MOUSE

Highways To North Get $15M

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Chretien, minister of Indian affairs and northern development, announced today the federal government will spend $15 million this year on two highways to the north that eventually will cost $166 million.

The $15 million is the largest amount of money spent by this department in a single year on northern roads and is a clear indication of the government's "commitment to northern development," he said in a speech that touched on everything from Indians to highways and pipelines.

He said the $9.1 million of the $15 million will be spent on the Mackenzie Highway and the remainder to the highway between Dempster, in the Yukon, to Arctic Red River, N.W.T.

CRTC May Probe SC Radio Ads

The Canadian Radio Television Commission will "investigate" if local British Columbia radio stations refuse to grant New Democratic leader Dave Barrett the "free and equal" time he wants to counteract two-pro-Socred broadcast series, an official of the commission said today.

John Lawrence of the CRTC, made the comment in Ottawa when asked to elaborate on a telegram received Wednesday from chairman Pierre Juneau to Barrett.

Barrett had earlier written to Juneau to ask for CRTC support in his campaign for free broadcast time to offset the current Ask Your Provincial Government series and a series of pro-Socred editorial comments sponsored by London Drugs.

Although Lawrence said that the commission would investigate any complaint arising out of a broadcaster's refusal to provide free and equal time, he pointed out that this did not mean that the stations "necessarily" have any obligation to provide it.

COMPENSATION CAME MORE WAYS THAN ONE

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A woman rather messily altered an $84.36 workmen's compensation cheque to read $200,984.36 and a bank cashed it last week, State Treasurer Gertrude Donahey said today. It was one of the largest forgeries in Ohio history.

The forger, who was not identified, fled with the money to Florida before the fraud was discovered. But Mrs. Donahey said a police officer found her and recovered all but $7,000.

Nixon Wants Oil

Chabot Acts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Labor Minister James Chabot says he wants to meet separately Friday with representatives of the International Woodworkers of America and Forest Industrial Relations to discuss B.C. coast forest industry contract talks, "the position we're in and where we go from here."

Court Ace Quits

IRA BEATS GIRL FOR FIVE DAYS

BELFAST (CP-AP) — Police described today the condition of a 15-year-old girl beaten for five days and tarred and feathered by the IRA as "sickening." Her face was beaten to a pulp and her hair torn out by the roots.

The official wing of the Irish Republican Army said the girl was a spy for Scotland Yard and had given information, in return for money and drugs, which had led to the arrest of some men.

Belfast police said the IRA's spy accusation "obviously is a wild attempt to justify a most brutal assault on a young girl."

The girl, whose name was withheld for her security, lives near the Northern Ireland capital's Falls Road, an IRA citadel. She was taken from her home Friday night.

Police said a nightmare five days followed. They said she was moved secretly from place to place, beaten at regular intervals, her hair shaven and torn out by the roots.

The climax of her "punishment" came Wednesday when she was tarred and feathered in front of some 200 persons. Soldiers found her lying beside a lamp-post, unable to walk.

A police spokesman said: "The girl was in a condition that can only be described as sickening. Her face, legs and body are a mass of bruises — her face was beaten to a pulp."

In a statement, the IRA said the girl's "punishment" would have been more severe if she had been older. "We would like to inform residents of the need for this action and why it was so lenient. This person was a member of a spy ring operating in this town."

Manpower Snipped—Phil Laughs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada Manpower and Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi are engaged in a battle of words over who can claim credit for swiping from Oregon State a course for job applicants called creative job search techniques.

It started when Canada Manpower officials in Vancouver accused Gaglardi of pinching their posters outlining the program, which has been in use for about 2½ years.

Manpower said Gaglardi was cutting the name Canada Manpower off the bottoms of the posters and sticking them up on the walls of the Victoria office of the B.C. Alliance of Businessmen, an organization set up by Gaglardi to help unemployed persons find work.

Doug Tang, a Manpower specialist in agency relationships, said the federal organization got the program from the Oregon bureau of labor in 1968. They said it was first tried in the Manpower office in Victoria and later adopted as a national program.

He said the free three-hour course is between 70 and 75 per cent successful in enabling applicants to land jobs.

Jacques Khouri, a Manpower public relations man, said the B.C. government "is leading people to believe they are conducting the program."

Gaglardi retorted, "Excuse me while I fall off my chair laughing.

"I was the guy who brought the program in from Portland."

In Portland, Norman Nilsen, Oregon state labor commissioner, suggested both were wrong.

Nilsen, one of the founders of the Oregon program, said he believed he passed the idea along to B.C. Attorney-General Leslie Peterson who held the labor portfolio until 1968.

Nilsen said Peterson "is a friend of mine and a very fine fellow."

Anti-War Demonstrations Swell

Times News Services

Hundreds of anti-war protesters were arrested by police across the United States today as demonstrations against President Nixon's blockade of North Vietnamese ports erupted in cities coast to coast.

The United Nations building was closed to the public today after demonstrators chained themselves to seats in the security council chamber. In Paris, thousands marched through the capital in protest, and in London police were called our to remove demonstrators from around the U.S. embassy.

Several persons were injured in Manila when demonstrators started tossing homemade grenades outside the U.S. embassy.

In the U.S., arrests were estimated to have topped 900 this week, with the National Guard called out to patrol university grounds.

The disorders were the most serious since the May, 1970, protests over the U.S. invasion of Cambodia, when colleges and universities through the country were shut down.

The Massachusetts Senate voted 36 to 1 to condemn the mining of Vietnam waters "in the strongest possible terms."

More than 250 policemen used tear gas and nightsticks to disperse some 3,000 protesters at the University of Florida in Gainesville Wednesday night.

In Victoria, a demonstration protesting the U.S. blockade of North Vietnam is planned by the Student Anti-War Committee at 5 p.m. today in Centennial Square.

They also authorize unlimited police searches of private homes; give mayors the powers to impress citizens for urgent civil or military needs; levy additional taxes on movie tickets and restaurant tabs; deny travel abroad to all males of draft age; and allow officials to ration food.

In the north, about 25 miles from Hue, the North Vietnamese launched their first sizeable probes against the My Chanh river defence line and were pushed back. Military sources predicted a major assault around May 19, the birthday of Ho Chi Minh.

Tank-led Communist forces launched their second attack in three days against the Ben Het base camp in the central highlands. The South Vietnamese said the assault was beaten off with U.S. and South Vietnamese planes, killing 167 North Vietnamese and destroying 11 tanks.

Hanoi radio said eight more American jets were shot down over North Vietnam, five over Hanoi itself. It also reported two Russian ships hit in Haiphong harbor and a Chinese trade mission hit in Hanoi.

The U.S. command said 10 MiGs were destroyed in air battles over the north, for the loss of three American planes, bringing the total to 38 planes and 37 helicopters lost since the start of the North Vietnamese offensive March 30.

A special 75-man provincial police emergency unit, flown from Montreal by Canadian Armed Forces aircraft, entered the town at 11 p.m., cleared up the roadblocks and returned operations at the radio station to normal.

All businesses except a few grocery stores and pharmacies were open today. They had closed Wednesday.

About 2,000 workers, mostly employed by Iron Ore of Canada and Wabush Mines Ltd., still were off the job.

TOUR BY 'COPTER

Reporter David Oancia said:

"We passed the first roadblock a couple miles from the airport as we flew west toward the town. A truck trailer, laden with heavy cement pipes, had been parked across the highway.

"Two lange yellow buses and a smaller green one blocked the shoulders of the road, but cars were still passing unhindered by the strikers manning the blockade."

The two men later walked around the town.

"Eight police vehicles had been knocked out of action — the nose of one was smashed in, a few had been battered and the tires of most had been slashed."

JOIN THE PROTEST

In Mont Laurier, 100 miles north of Ottawa, 125 teachers also walked out. Another 1,300 teachers were expected at a rally at a Montreal high school occupied by 500 teachers.

The CNTU council in Ste. Hyacinthe, 30 miles east of Montreal, announced that about 2,500 members of its 44 affiliated unions would hold study sessions Friday to show solidarity with the three imprisoned labor leaders.

Offer Declined

PARIS (AP) — The Queen has expressed a desire to see the widow of Charles de Gaulle during the sovereign's visit to France next week, but Mme. de Gaulle has declined. Informants said Wednesday that Mme. de Gaulle sent profound thanks to the Queen, but said she remains in total retirement since the death of her husband.

"For some reason the government has refused to recognize the urgency of the situation," Thompson said.

The pipeline, which would carry oil from the vast North Slope reserves to the southern Alaska port of Valdez, may be delayed for some time, despite Morton's decision today.

Because of injunctions obtained by American conservation groups, which have already stalled it for two years, Morton merely submitted notice today to the environmentalists that he intends to issue the required permits. It is not up to the U.S. courts to decide whether or not the pipeline will be built.

Thompson today brought Morton's announcement to the floor of the House in Ottawa, asking the government what its next step would be.

LAING REPLIES

As a result, Thompson said, Veterans' Affairs Minister Arthur Laing delivered a "very weak" reply.

Laing, Thompson said, merely pointed out that Canada six months ago offered the Mackenzie River route as an alternative to the TAPS line.

Morton's statement today said a Canadian line would require "at least three to five years" longer than the three years estimated for delivery of oil through the Alaska line.

Morton's statement listed three specific factors working against the Canadian alternative:

"2. Uncertainty and delay in arranging for financing of a trans-Canada oil pipeline.

"3. Delay of project pending the completion of environmental, engineering, and construction studies for a Canadian route."

The interior secretary said he is "convinced that it is our best national interest to avoid all further delays and uncertainties in planning the development of Alaska North Slope oil reserves by having a secure pipeline located under the total jurisdiction and for the exclusive use of the United States."

Morton's mention of U.S. requirements for all of the pipeline capacity apparently referred to suggestions that a trans-Canadian route could also be used to carry oil from Canada's Mackenzie Valley and would thus involve deliveries of some oil to Canadian refineries.

Here in Victoria both Ray Williston, Minister of Lands, Forests and Water Resources and Ken Kiernan, Minister of Recreation and Conservation, were unavailable for comment on the development.

B.C. ATTITUDE

However, Valter Raudsepp, Deputy Minister of Water Resources, pointed out that the official B.C. attitude, as previously outlined in the Legislature, is that the pipeline negotiations are under the jurisdiction of the United States and Ottawa.

"The government would not feel that we can make direct representation to the Americans," Raudsepp said. He pointed out that the B.C. government had asked Ottawa to ensure that steps be taken "to find an alternative solution to the tanker route."

He would not comment on whether the B.C. government would make further approaches to Ottawa on the question.

Charges Denied

LONDON (AP) — Britain denied charges today that its planes and warships had attacked Southern Yemen in support of a conspiracy by conservative Arab neighbors to overthrow the former British territory's Marxist regime. A defence ministry spokesman said the charges sounded "like a typical propaganda broadcast."

DANNY BOY REFUSAL GETS SYRUPY REPLY

STOCKPORT, England (AP) — A nightclub singer was doused with molasses and sprinkled with feathers after she turned down a customer's request to sing the Irish ballad Danny Boy.

Kathy Varden, 24, told police a band of men dragged her into a park, gagged her and tied her to a fence before the molasses-and-feathers treatment.

Two men held down Miss Varden's 35-year-old husband Harry while the others poured half a bucket of molasses over her, she said. They ran away, leaving a placard pinned to her dress. "Danny Boy forever," it said.

The couple was treated in a hospital for shock and bruises, authorities reported.

Age of Communication

WENDY DEY — EDITOR

A degree from a school of journalism or broadcasting doesn't necessarily guarantee a job. Although most big city newspapers now look for university types, a journalism graduate with no experience would almost certainly lose out to an experienced reporter with no degree. A degree may give you a foot in the door — but little more.

Has Own Show

Daphne Goode, 19, now has her own show on Cable, 10, Victoria. She is hostess for the Island Hobbyist, Thursdays at 7 p.m.

Catherine Barker, assistant program director at Cable 10, was able to study television production during her last two years at Cowichan Senior Secondary in Duncan.

After graduation, she went to Montreal and Halifax to work in radio. Miss Barker had no trouble finding jobs because of her high school training in television and secretarial work.

She returned to Victoria to work in the department of visual arts at the University of Victoria until September, 1970, when she was offered the job at Cable 10.

Miss Barker also has her own show, Ladies First, Monday evenings at 7 p.m.

She advises students interested in a career in television to take any courses available in high schools and then travel for a year working in as many different "aspects" of television and broadcasting as possible. She suggests students work as volunteers at local radio stations, if no course is offered at their school.

Although lucky breaks can still happen occasionally, most students had better rely on a sound training in the communications field.

PR Option

The University of Western Ontario offers a public relations option to journalism students.

Students at Carleton may major in journalism alone, or combine journalism with honors work in arts, science, commerce or engineering.

Graduates with a bachelor's degree in another discipline may take a one-year program at Western or Carleton to qualify for a diploma in journalism or Bachelor of Journalism degree.

Other universities, such as the University of Victoria, offer courses in creative writing. The teaching program at the centre for communications and the arts at Simon Fraser University is the only one of its kind in North America.

Professional Team

The centre does not grant degrees and work in the program is non-credit, but students have the opportunity to work with practising professionals. The centre's film program is the only university program in Canada specifically oriented toward production, rather than film study and appreciation.

The videotape workshop provides students with training in all areas of video production and experimental techniques. Crews produce weekly programs for Cable 10, Vancouver.

Several Canadian universities offer courses in film as optional courses within the department of fine arts or drama. The department of visual arts at the University of Victoria provides training in film and photography.

Students may obtain a bachelor's degree with concentration in film from York University, Toronto. A four-year program or one-year diploma program for arts graduates is available at Loyola, Montreal.

Several community colleges across Canada offer courses in journalism. Students receive a background in the liberal arts as well as specialized training in layout and design, editing, broadcasting, photography, and the fundamentals of printing and typesetting. Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, Toronto, emphasizes practical experience and daily reporting. Its student newspaper is operated along the lines of a large metropolitan daily newspaper.

Common Year

The business management division of the British Columbia Institute of Technology has a two-year course in broadcast communications technology. Students take a common first year, but beginning in the fall of 1973 will select one of four electives in second year. The electives are: radio production, television production, radio and television news or audio-visual technician.

A two-year television, stage and radio arts program has also been established at the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology.

Initiatives Grant Helps Home Industry

A program to aid cottage industry on Vancouver Island will now be able to continue until September, thanks to an additional grant from the federal government.

The $23,000 grant, made available to Island Home Industries Ltd. through the local initiatives program, will allow the 15-man company to travel all of Vancouver Island, instead of merely the Greater Victoria area, said Jeanne Wallace, a weaver and marketing adviser.

Local craftsmen have already been invited to exhibit at trade fairs in Dallas and New York and Miss Wallace has compiled a sales book of photographs and samples to increase market prospects. She emphasized, however, that local stores will still get first opportunity to sell items produced on Vancouver Island.

Dale Peterson, an engineer and member of the Home Industries team, will travel to the Maritimes this summer to examine co-operative organizations of craftsmen there and study processing techniques.

Technology Only Means to an End

OTTAWA (CP) — Science and technology should be considered as tools for reaching society's goals rather than as goals in themselves, the Science Council of Canada said Wednesday.

The council was reporting to a news conference its comments on recommendations made earlier this year by the Senate committee on science policy.

The council said it differed in three main areas with the Senate committee, but the "most profound divergence" concerned the purpose of science and technology.

Implicit in the Senate's report is a danger that science and technology could be regarded as goals in themselves, the council said.

The council opposed budgetary targets for stimulation of research and development. The Senate committee recommended that national expenditure on research and development should reach 2.5 per cent of the gross national product by 1980.

The science council also differed with the Senate committee over separation of basic and applied research.

"The council seriously questions the desirability of separating basic and applied research — in its performance, funding, administration and communication. This, we feel, is a retrograde step and runs counter to the whole weight of evidence on the advantages of interaction."

Centralization of government science and technology into a few agencies, leaving the departments with diminished scientific competence, also was criticized in the science council report.

"Canada's real need is to redirect those departmental programs which no longer are squarely oriented toward their missions."

The third major area of disagreement with the Senate committee concerns the emphasis on research and development activities as a means to promote industrial innovation, the report said.

A policy that increases research and development without also considering the other aspects would not meet the desired objective — "which we share with the senators" — of increasing innovative capabilities of industries."

Glares and scowls illustrate anger over pensions.

Warm Day, Hot Protest By 150 Senior Citizens

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The sun was warm Wednesday afternoon but the old-age pensioners who had come from many parts of Vancouver Island weren't basking in it.

Intent on other purposes, the sun's rays went unnoticed as senior citizens burned with anger.

They stood outside the Legislative Buildings — about 150 strong but representing more than 15,000 members of the Old-Age Pensioners Organization in B.C.

Their wrath had spilled over with the announcement of federal Finance Minister Turner's budget in which pension increases of $2.88 a month were listed.

STOLEN

"All we're getting back is what they've been stealing from us for years. In Mr. (former prime minister Lester) Pearson's time I went to Ottawa and asked Mitchell Sharp, who was then minister of finance, for a true living cost bonus. I also asked that it be retroactive. The answer was no to both requests.

"Now they come and offer us 2 per cent when the cost of living's been up 4 and 5 per cent all the years from that time."

Wednesday's protesters said basic pensions should be $150 — not $82,80 — and accompanied by true cost-of-living bonuses.

They talked of plans to charter a 50-seat bus and go to Ottawa, adding that $9,000 had already been donated for this purpose by department stores, pensioners and others.

The organizers asked for calm but resentment grew as Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell explained the provincial government's position.

He said the idea of a guaranteed income for all citizens had been born in British Columbia.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett received an ovation when he suggested it had been "stillborn."

The old folk also protested when Barrett pointed out that provincial cabinet ministers could serve between 12 and 20 years, retire at 55 and enjoy a pension of $870 a month.

TAX BITE

One quiet-spoken woman persisted until she finally caught Campbell's ear. What, she asked, was the use of giving people over 65 a homeowner's bonus of $50 if it was taken away in taxes the next month. Her taxes, she said, had gone up $67.

Campbell replied that this was because municipal taxes had been raised.

"I've looked at prison menus, whth chilled juices, two poached eggs and the rest. They would cost $10 a day and the government is offering to pay us $5 to exist.

"I say we should go back and board with them (in prison) then we wouldn't have to pay school taxes and that sort of thing."

CAMPBELL PENSION SWITCH

By ROBERT OLVER
Times Staff

The B.C. government Wednesday went on record as favoring substantial increases in pensions to senior citizens in spite of the fact that in the last legislative session the Socreds moved a form of closure to stifle any debate on the issue.

The apparent deviation from party line came in a statement by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell Wednesday to a demonstration by about 150 senior citizens outside the legislative buildings.

Campbell, who met earlier in the day with a three-member delegation fom the Old-Age Pensioners' Organization, told The Times later "The B.C. government has been on record for more than five years as favoring a guaranteed income for senior citizens of $3,000 to $3,200 for married couples and $1,800 to $2,000 for single people."

These figures were somewhat better across the board than what the delegation said the OAPO had requested from the government.

"We asked for $150 a month instead of the basic current minimum of $82.88, and we had a very fruitful meeting," said Oliver Travera of Campbell River, spokesman for the group.

★ ★ ★

That means that a married couple would now get about $165.76 monthly or twice $82.88. If what Campbell says is true, the government would like them to get up to $266 monthly for marrieds and about $166 monthly for singles.

This is $83.12 monthly more for singles and $100.24 better for married couples.

That is the deal Campbell says the B.C. government would like to see now but here is what actually happened last Feb. 10 when opposition members tried to discuss the matter in the house:

Government action at that time revolved around an amendment to a Liberal motion deploring the Throne Speech for failing to provide adequate support for senior citizens.

New Democratic leader Dave Barrett moved the amendment to the effect that there should be a guaranteed minimum income of $200 monthly for senior citizens aged 65 or over who had been resident five years in the province.

Before the motion could be formally put to the legislature, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said it should be ruled out-of-order because it called on the government to spend public money "without the recommendation of the Crown."

Under parliamentary rules, only the government can propose money bills.

Speaker William Murray then ruled that the motion was in order, but Peterson challenged the ruling and it was defeated by the government on a 33-16 vote.

The NDP motion also called for free medical drugs, free medicare coverage and $1 a day intermediate and chronic care for all pensioners in the province.

The government action in overruling the speaker was regarded at the time as a form of closure which had been invoked only three times in the past 11 years.

The debate on Feb. 10, although it mounted to fury, was never allowed to touch on the issue of increased pensions.

But Wednesday the government, as represented by Campbell, told the senior citizens: "The B.C. government, for five years, has been committed — firmly — to the idea of a guaranteed annual income for pensioners."

Young Denies Using Old Land Use Report

City council's planning committee chairman Ald. Mike Young, said today there is no need to rescind the James Bay Transportation and Land Use report of 1967.

He added it is not being used "as a planning tool" by city council.

Both the Beacon Hill Park Association and the James Bay Community Association have called for scrapping the report because they fear it would lead to deterioration of Beacon Hill Park and "destruction" of James Bay.

YOUNG

NOT APPLIED

Young said the report should not be given the dignity or indignity of being rescinded.

"It is there," he said, "it is not being applied. We are not using it as a basic guideline for policy planning."

Young said he shared the PHPA's concern that Douglas Street might be widened.

"I would agree, it does not appear to be necessary," he said.

Young said the real problem is the dispersal of traffic from James Bay, made crucial by the number of provincial government offices in the area.

"We have to face reality, we may have to have an extension on Michigan but it's too early to say for sure."

COVERED ROAD

He added that whatever was decided, care would be taken that the park was not damaged.

Ruling out, for reasons of cost, the feasibility of a tunnel through the park, Young said:

"There is somewhat of a natural cut there with high ridges on both sides. It's really a speculation but it might be possible to go through there and cover over the driveway."

Young agreed that future traffic problems could be eased if the provincial government adopted a policy of dispersing office space around the periphery of the downtown city, and utilizing many of the second and third floors of city buildings that are now unused.

WALKOUTS SPREAD TO UPPER ISLAND

One-day walkouts in protest over lack of collective bargaining rights in the provincial civil service spread up-Island today.

The walkouts do not have union authorization.

While between 160 and 170 highways department maintenance employees based at Langford returned to work this morning, 128 stayed away from work in Port Alberni and Courtenay-Campbell River.

Twenty-six were off work at Port Alberni, 70 in Courtenay, 15 in Campbell River and 17 in Port McNeill and Comox-Courtenay.

The employees are members of the B.C. Government Employees Union, which has campaigned unsuccessfully for years for bargaining rights for provincial employees.

'Three Fingers Point' At Curtis—Gaglardi

By AB KENT

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis "has three fingers pointing at him" and should watch out before pointing the finger at anyone else, Welfare Minister Gaglardi said today.

The cabinet minister was replying to charges by the Saanich mayor about high welfare costs.

Curtis "should look to the needs in his own municipality first," Gaglardi said. He added that the mayor "has been making a lot of noises and doing a lot of talking"—but much of what he said made no sense.

The issue of welfare costs "has been batted around for 50 years and there is no easy, fast solution," Gaglardi said.

The mayor of Saanich, along with the mayors of some 70 other B.C. communities, wrote Gaglardi last month protesting welfare costs.

Curtis said the municipal share of social assistance should be reduced from 15 per cent to 10 per cent and questioned whether welfare was a suitable charge on real property taxation in the first place.

He did not deny that provincially the welfare bill had been brought down, but he still argued the municipal share is too large.

Gaglardi pointed out that last year the province had been able to return to the municipalities $3.5 million after the municipalities reduced their welfare rolls by 13 per cent.

He acknowledged receipt of "quite a few letters" and said review of welfare policy had been in progress for some time. Nothing had been firmed as a result so far, he said, but he replied to Mayor Curtis that he would examine the request "and do my best."

"There are certain responsibilities incumbent upon municipalities and some on the senior governments," Gaglardi said.

Last year, when he became minister (of rehabilitation and social improvement) the municipal share of welfare costs was cut from 20 per cent to 15 per cent, Gaglardi said.

But in 1967, as Curtis pointed out, the local share was only 10 per cent.

"I made the municipalities masters in their own house and gave them authority to stop payment on any (welfare) case," the minister said.

FRASER

★

BETTER SPLIT ON WAY?

A Socred backbencher today predicted that within 30 days the government will lessen the share of welfare costs that must be paid by municipalities in B.C.

Alex Fraser (Cariboo) made the statement after watching a letter campaign started by him finally have some effect on Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi.

Gaglardi admitted today he is looking "forcibly" at the possibility of "improving" the municipalities' share of welfare costs, which now stands at a theoretical 15 per cent. The senior governments share the other 85 per cent.

Fraser says that because of the formula, some municipalities are paying as much as 19 per cent and others are paying 12 per cent.

LISTENING

Fraser wants it reduced to 10 per cent but said he doesn't expect to get all he wants.

Gaglardi said Fraser is saying 'something that could possibly be" but he would not comment on the prediction that an announcement will come in 30 days.

"You could say it's a possiblity,'' Gaglardi said. "We're looking at it very forcibly and actively."

Wade Stays With Board

Architect John Wade said today he has no intention of resigning from the city's Advisory Planning Commission.

His resignation was requested by Mayor Peter Pollen earlier this week.

Pollen blamed some of the city's planning ills on Wade, saying he had given "professional and biased counsel."

Wade said today, "I have no intention of resigning at this moment."

Wanted: A Buck for a Friend in Need

IT'S A LONELY WORLD for many, and if a friend to the distressed dies of starvation, it will be lonelier still. NEED, Victoria's year-old crisis line, faces a crisis of its own. The outfit is broke. And while its people hope for a renewal of the grants that have supported its volunteer-manned, round-the-clock telephone service, only a swift transfusion of dollars will guarantee survival.

I rarely ask you to tap pocket or purse in aid of even the most useful community service. I wouldn't be doing so now, if it weren't for a solid conviction that NEED shouldn't be allowed to go under.

The best way to make my point would be to follow a crisis line team through an actual shift. I suggested this notion to co-ordinator David Stewart, who promptly vetoed it. The thing about NEED, he explained, is that all calls — about 7,000 as of today — are received in confidence, and the anonymity of the caller strictly protected.

The two or three who handle each shift on the phones are good listeners. They don't sit in moral judgment, but they do encourage the caller to face his situation realistically.

The range of calls is infinite. In the same shift, a volunteer may be asked for the correct spelling of a word, or find himself lending an ear to a caller whose talk of suicide falls on the well-tuned ear as a cry for help.

NEED listens and discusses. Sometimes the chance to talk out a worry or a heartache is all that's required. Again, the volunteer may outline the workings of a community agency that specializes in help of the sort indicated.

A phone jingles. One of the volunteers on shift answers. To you or me, the loud music and background voices might indicate that some kidder at a party is having a little misguided fun.

Perhaps so. But the volunteer has learned from experience that the person at the other end may be making a roundabout approach to a problem that he can't handle alone.

The next call may be from somebody old and lonely. Or a child may have come home from school to a depressingly empty house — parents at work, vague fears, and a silence that demands breaking.

So she phones NEED. She and the volunteer chat about this and that, and finally the kid goes away reassured by the knowledge that a friendly voice is never more than a dialing distant.

Though the service hears from young and old, at least half those who get in touch occupy the middle years. The next call might be from the wife in a couple who find themselves with children grown and gone, and a frightening gulf between them.

Referral to a counselling agency may be indicated. Often enough, though a good talk — which the husband may wind up sharing — convinces the despairful that all is not necessarily lost.

Perhaps in a couple of days, or a week or a month, the same anonymous voice will be heard from again.

"Things are going better," the message may run. Or, "I don't feel so wretched any more."

Some calls are passed on by telephone operators who have come to recognize the troubleshooting potential of the service.

NEED is now lending an ear to more than 600 callers a month. Tonight, a young baby-sitter frightened at the weight of her responsibility may dial. Some emergency that demands fast referral may be reported. An indignant neighbor who feels that someone should do something about a case of child abuse may set the apparatus of rescue in motion.

And now, NEED itself, a non-profit society with three paid staffers and enough volunteers to man its phones every hour of the year, stands in need of rescue.

If you can help with a buck or two, send your contribution direct to NEED — The Crisis Line, P.O. Box 311.

This service has demonstrated its value. I don't think we should let it fail for lack of a helping hand.

. . . And Still They Wait

The district's executive committee met Wednesday and tabled its own recommendation of some time ago that the seven senior staff outside the Canadian Union of Public Employees get the same 7.5 per cent raise this year as last.

The recommendation has been tabled or referred half a dozen times.

Committee chairman Hugh Curtis said this morning the committee was "rather pressed for time" and so the matter was tabled. He said it was not a question of "leaving them (staff) on the hook."

But another committee member, Earl Pallister of Langford, said he is disappointed.

"I don't think it is correct that everyone else got a wage increase and we leave these people on the hook."

He said the next meeting of the executive committee will be sometime within the next month.

Union Violence Hits Montreal, Sept-Iles

Times News Services

The third straight day of labor unrest hit Quebec today as thousands of union members continued walkouts protesting both the jailing of three union leaders and their own working conditions.

Montreal and Sept-Iles, 400 miles northeast of Quebec City bore the brunt of the protest but other communities were also affected.

Two small bombs exploded today at two separate small power stations serving Montreal's subway system, causing some damage but not interfering with normal operations.

But motor traffic was in turmoil early today in the city after kegs of nails were dumped on one bridge and a main expressway. Police said the nails on the west-end Mercier bridge across the St. Lawrence River and on the north-end Metropolitan Expressway could "be tied in with the labor conflicts.

MECHANICS LEAVE

Also in Montreal 400 garage mechanics who service buses and subway trains for the public transit system left their jobs to join other sympathy walkouts across the province protesting the imprisonment Tuesday of Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau.

Union leaders said thousands of construction workers, who stayed away from building sites in Montreal and Quebec City Wednesday, were continuing the walkouts today.

In Quebec City, Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer told a legislature committee today he is as "desperate as other ministers" in dealings with the federal government but the central government was not going to "have his skin."

He told Premier Robert Bourassa that if the Quebec government could stand up to unions it could stand up to the federal government, which he said is bludgeoning Quebec.

The dramatic attack by a minister on the Liberal government's dealings with federal authorities came on the heels of reports that two other Quebec cabinet ministers have resigned over recent federal moves in the social welfare field. The reports could not be officially confirmed.

Published reports have said the other cabinet ministers are Social Affairs Minister Claude Castonguay and Civil Service Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier.

Sept-Iles, the iron ore town, faced another tense day today after about 5,000 metal and construction workers agreed at a union rally to continue protest walkouts.

STAY OUT

At today's rally they said they would remain off the job until the three leaders — Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau — are released from jail.

Meanwhile, Mayor Donald Galliene said the situation in the town was peaceful. He appealed to the population of 18,000 to stay at home today if possible to avoid a repetition of Wednesday's clashes with police.

"I don't think we're going to have any more trouble," he said. "I've told everybody to stay home — that way we won't run into situations like we had yesterday."

The trouble began early

Times News Services

The Soviet Union demanded today that the United States immediately cancel its "piratic" naval blockade of North Vietnam, warning that the U.S. was following "a dangerous and slippery road" which endangered international peace and security.

China joined in to denounce the U.S. action of planting mines in North Vietnam's harbors, calling the move "a flagrant provocation against the people of Vietnam and the world."

Following the dropping of mines — which activated themselves today — in harbor entrances earlier this week, U.S. planes continued an intense bombardment of military targets in North Vietnam today.

Shells from what the 7th Fleet said was the most powerful cruiser-destroyer fleet assembled in the western Pacific since the Second World War were striking within four miles of Haiphong.

At the same time, North Vietnamese land forces battled their way into the provincial capital of An Loc, which has been under siege since April 7. North Vietnamese also continued a heavy barrage on two other fronts — the central highlands and near Hue.

In Washington, President Nixon met two high ranking Soviet officials today — a surprise session which indicated to observers the increased U.S. offensive in Vietnam, and the resulting Soviet condemnation, still may not wreck the May 22 Moscow summit.

The Russian reaction, reported by the Tass News Agency and broadcast by Moscow Radio, pledged continued military help to North Vietnam and said if the United States wanted peace in Vietnam it should return to the Paris peace talk tables. No mention was made of Nixon's forthcoming visit to Moscow.

The Russians said no matter what false pretexts are used to cover up the adventurist actions of the U.S. armed forces in Vietnam the real purpose of these actions is obvious — "to save the notorious Vietnamization policy which suffers an obvious failure."

"These actions show again for the whole world the piratic nature of the war which the United States has unleashed and continues against the Vietnamese people for many years."

In South Vietnam, President Nguyen Van Thieu signed new martial laws into effect today, subjecting citizens to more taxes, less fun, extended draft ages, press gangs and police searches.

The laws order 18-year-old youths to report immediately for military service, cut down on deferments and raise the draft age from 33 to 43.

Tankers To Ply West Coast

Times News Services

United States Interior Secretary Rogers Morton this afternoon approved construction of the controversial Trans-Alaska pipeline, rejecting a proposed Canadian alternative down the Mackenzie River basin to Edmonton.

The decision means oil supertankers will be plying the British Columbia coast, through the Strait of Juan de Fuca to Cherry Point, Washington.

In Victoria Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal MP David Anderson said: "It's tremendous news for us," because he has learned his appeal in U.S. Supreme Court was won today as well.

The Supreme Court has ruled Canadians, namely Anderson and the Canadian Wildlife Federation, can argue in a U.S. court.

"I now have a right to argue in court that the U.S. Department of the Interior acted illegally in issuing a permit as it has done today," Anderson said.

In Vancouver, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said he was "disappointed" at the U.S. decision.

He described the proposed pipeline and oil tanker route as "a very, very foolish move" and said Canada will continue to fight against it.

Sharp said U.S. authorities didn't give adequate consideration to Canada's submission favoring a Mackenzie valley route.

The sudden announcement, while not unexpected, did come as a surprise in Ottawa where as late as Wednesday afternoon Energy and Resources Minister Donald MacDonald was telling the Commons Canada has again

COLLISION KILLS 73

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (Reuter)— All 73 persons aboard a British freighter were feared dead or missing following a pre-dawn collision today with a Liberian oil tanker, port authorities said.

Both vessels were enveloped in flames following the collision in the River Plate, off Montevideo.

Highways To North Get $15M

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Chretien, minister of Indian affairs and northern development, announced today the federal government will spend $15 million this year on two highways to the north that eventually will cost $166 million.

The $15 million is the largest amount of money spent by his department in a single year on northern roads and is a clear indication of the government's "commitment to northern development," he said in a speech that touched on everything from Indians to highways and pipelines.

He said the $9.1 million of the $15 million will be spent on the Mackenzie Highway and the remainder to the highway between Dempster, in the Yukon, to Arctic Red River, N.W.T.

CRTC May Probe SC Radio Ads

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission will "investigate" if local British Columbia radio stations refuse to grant New Democratic leader Dave Barrett the "free and equal" time he wants to counteract two pro-Socred broadcast series, an official of the commission said today.

John Lawrence of the CRTC, made the comment in Ottawa when asked to elaborate on a telegram received Wednesday from chairman Pierre Juneau to Barrett.

Barrett had earlier written to Juneau to ask for CRTC support in his campaign for free broadcast time to offset the current Ask Your Provincial Government series and a series of pro-Socred editorial comments sponsored by London Drugs.

Although Lawrence said that the commission would investigate any complaint arising out of a broadcaster's refusal to provide free and equal time, he pointed out that this did not mean that the stations "necessarily" have any obligation to provide it.

COMPENSATION CAME MORE WAYS THAN ONE

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A woman rather messily altered an $84.36 workmen's compensation cheque to read $200,984.36 and a bank cashed it last week, State Treasurer Gertrude Donahey said today. It was one of the largest forgeries in Ohio history.

The forger, who was not identified, fled with the money to Florida before the fraud was discovered. But Mrs. Donahey said a police officer found her and recovered all but $7,000.

IRA BEAT GIRL FOR FIVE DAYS

BELFAST (CP-AP) — Police described today the condition of a 15-year-old girl beaten for five days and tarred and feathered by the IRA as "sickening." Her face was beaten to a pulp and her hair torn out by the roots.

The official wing of the Irish Republican Army said the girl was a spy for Scotland Yard and had given information, in return for money and drugs, which had led to the arrest of some men.

Belfast police said the IRA's spy accusation "obviously is a wild attempt to justify a most brutal assault on a young girl."

The girl, whose name was withheld for her security, lives near the Northern Ireland capital's Falls Road, an IRA citadel. She was taken from her home Friday night.

Police said a nightmare five days followed. They said she was moved secretly from place to place, beaten at regular intervals, her hair shaven and torn out by the roots.

The climax of her "punishment" came Wednesday when she was tarred and feathered in front of some 200 persons. Soldiers found her lying beside a lamp-post, unable to walk.

A police spokesman said: "The girl was in a condition that can only be described as sickening. Her face, legs and body are a mass of bruises — her face was beaten to a pulp."

In a statement, the IRA said the girl's "punishment" would have been more severe if she had been older. "We would like to inform residents of the need for this action and why it was so lenient. This person was a member of a spy ring operating in this town."

Manpower Snipped—Phil Laughs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada Manpower and Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi are engaged in a battle of words over who can claim credit for swiping from Oregon State a course for job applicants called creative job search techniques.

It started when Canada Manpower officials in Vancouver accused Gaglardi of pinching their posters outlining the program, which has been in use for about 2½ years.

Manpower said Gaglardi was cutting the name Canada Manpower off the bottoms of the posters and sticking them up on the walls of the Victoria office of the B.C. Alliance of Businessmen, an organization set up by Gaglardi to help unemployed persons find work.

Doug Tang, a Manpower specialist in agency relationships, said the federal organization got the program from the Oregon bureau of labor in 1968. They said it was first tried in the Manpower office in Victoria and later adopted as a national program.

He said the free three-hour course is between 70 and 75 per cent successful in enabling applicants to land jobs.

Jacques Khouri, a Manpower public relations man, said the B.C. government "is leading people to believe they are conducting the program."

Gaglardi retorted, "Excuse me while I fall off my chair laughing.

"I was the guy who brought the program in from Portland."

In Portland, Norman Nilsen, Oregon state labor commissioner, suggested both were wrong.

Nilsen, one of the founders of the Oregon program, said he believed he passed the idea along to B.C. Attorney-General Leslie Peterson who held the labor portfolio until 1968.

Nilsen said Peterson "is a friend of mine and a very fine fellow."
